BOARD TO NAME NEW PRESIDENT

Ready for Negotiations With Candidates who Seek to Fill Mellen's Place.

WALL STREET STILL RULES

New York, July 18.—At a meeting of the directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad today the resignation of President Charles S. Mellen, which was presented to the board yesterday afternoon, was formally accepted.

Up to the present no one has been chosen to succeed Mellen, but a committee of three members of the board was appointed to take action in the matter of negotiations with any proposed successor, and report to the board. It was stated that any name mentioned as Mellen's successor at present was purely guess work.

Howard Elliot and Timothy E. Byrnes, the latter first vice-president of the New Haven, are prominently mentioned as possible successors to Mr. Mellen. Mr. Mellen was in New York, and being a director of the New Haven took advantage of his opportunity to attend the meeting. Asked for a statement, he replied:

"I have nothing to say now. My resignation speaks for itself. I may have a statement later."

Wall Street Still Rules.

The best opinion in New York's financial district today is that the great public of New England is not likely to be deceived by Mr. Mellen's resignation as president of the New Haven Railroad.

William Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan, and their associates and advisers, are meeting an up-to-the-minute situation.

MELLEN IS WORTH MILLION

State Street Man Declares Deposed President Is Well Supplied with Money.

HE CAME TO ROAD "BROKE"

Charles Sanger Mellen leaves the New Haven at the age of sixty-two years, a millionaire.

He came to the road just ten years ago to a month. "He was pretty well cleaned out," said a State street man today, "when the Morgan crowd brought him East. They gave him $50,000 a year for the ten years he has been doing their bidding—that's $500,000. Then the Morgan crowd put him in right on buying up New Haven stock on the ground floor. Mellen admitted that at the Interstate Commerce hearing.

"In 1907 when Connecticut got after the road Mellen admitted that he owned 8,000 shares of New Haven stock. At 155, what the stock was worth then, that's $1,240,000, and you can bet he has added to that.

"Now Mellen was in wrong in his speculation when he was out West with the Northern Pacific people. He lost a lot of money.

"The Morgan people put him in right. You can take it from me that he will go back to his potato patch at Stockbridge worth more than a million dollars.

"He's through with railroading. His day is done in these United States. He belongs to an order that is passed. But he won't starve with that million."

At the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing in Boston, Mr. Mellen told of two little transactions, on which he made $134,000 profit.

Once the company sold him 10,285 shares at $100 and he resold them at $102,000 profit. Another time, the road sold him 32,046 shares, and he resold them at about $1 a share profit. Much of this profit Mr. Mellen said, went to campaign contributions.

Youth Gives Blood to Save His Mother

Transfusion of Blood from Malden Boy Lasts an Hour.

Frank Lightbown, a twenty year-old Malden boy, today risked his life to save that of his mother, Mrs. William Lightbown of No. 1128 Fellaway.

Mrs. Lightbown, who is thirty-eight, has been anaemic for several years. Her condition recently became alarming. Doctors agreed that the only one way to save her was by transfusion of blood. Her son Frank volunteered. The operation was successfully carried out today in the Malden Hospital.

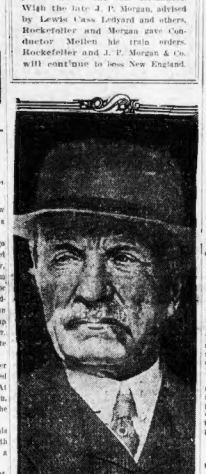
The surgeons made a slit three inches long in the boy's wrist and another in the wrist of his mother. The tubing was adjusted and for an hour the blood was slowly transferred. The mother gained strength immediately. Young Lightbown stood the ordeal splendidly.

Jail Girl's Suitor for Knife Duel

Jealousy on the part of two suitors resulted in Dennis Perry, twenty-five of No. 50 Lucas street, appearing before Judge Murray today charged with assault with a knife on Dominick Mercles. Perry was found guilty and sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

New England Railroad Boss

This is William Rockefeller, John D.'s brother. He is seventy-three years now, but still foreheaded. With the late J. P. Morgan, advised by Lewis Cass Ledyard and others, Rockefeller and Morgan gave conductor Mellen his train orders. Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan & Co. will continue to boss New England.



FANNIE MORSE, BOSTON ARTIST, SEEKS PROFITS

How Mrs. Fannie S. Morse, a noted Boston painter and mother of Pauline Agassiz Morse, the child actress, took up the business of selling a little tin washing machine, out of which a big fortune has been made, and in which society people were heavy investors, became known for the first time today in connection with a suit the Boston woman has brought in New York city.

Mrs. Morse asks the New York Supreme Court for an accounting of the profits of the washing machine sales, which she says have amounted to more than $200,000 in the past six months.

Mrs. Morse, who is a woman of refinement and talent, said today she began selling the washing machine to "build a theatre for her daughter" and to buy frames for 1,000 of her own paintings. She says she has made $100,000 herself, but that her partner has paid her but $8,000 of this. Her suit is brought against W. H. Esdohr & Co. of New York, claiming she was formerly Esdohr's partner and that most of her profits have not been paid her.

This action has revealed that within a few months a little tin washing machine, which costs 33 cents to manufacture and sells for $3.50, has taken between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 from the pockets of the "easy money" seekers of New York.

CABINET DISCUSSES MEXICO

President Wilson Calls for Records of All Incidents Leading Up to Crisis.

NOW AWAIT AMBASSADOR

WASHINGTON, July 18.—In preparation for the arrival of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, now on his way northward from Mexico, President Wilson today requested the State Department to furnish him with a full and complete file of all the information relative to the troubles in Mexico from the beginning of the Madero revolt to the present.

This vast mass of material, covering more than two years, will be sent to the White House, and the President intends to read it thoroughly so that he will be informed as to all developments of the Mexican situation before the arrival of Ambassador Wilson. The Cabinet discussed the Mexican crisis today.

Following the Cabinet session, several members of the President's official family stated that the Cabinet is a unit in supporting the Chief Executive's policy concerning Mexico, particularly as regards the non-recognition of President Huerta's government.

Cabinet Backs President.

Secretary Bryan, who returned from the first lap of his Chautauqua lecture tour this morning, was the President's first caller today.

The Secretary of State brought with him a large bundle of telegrams and correspondence relative to conditions in Mexico, including a number of dispatches from William Bayard Hale, President Wilson's personal representative in Mexico City, giving impression of present conditions south of the Rio Grande, particularly with respect to the stability of the Huerta government.

Mr. Hale does not consider that the present regime will last long, and has advised the administration against immediate recognition. No decision will be made in this matter, however, until after the conference with Ambassador Wilson.

United States Demands Protection.

The Mexican correspondence was thoroughly thrashed out at the cabinet session, but it was decided "to mark time" until the President has received first hand information from Mexico City.

In response to Consul Hanna's request for protection for Americans in the Durango section, the State Department has demanded action from the Mexican federal authorities. The department went further than usual, in that it requested the federal government to despatch troops from Torreon. Consul Hanna has previously reported foreigners, irrespective of nationality, being held by revolutionists for ransom in Durango. The prisoners at one time included the Archbishop of Durango.

Finds No Malice in Shooting of Poluso

John Mann, twenty two, of No. 5 Sanford street, appeared before Judge Murray today charged with murder in shooting Joseph Poluso of Frat street, South Boston, on the night of July 5, in front of a Washington street theatre. He pleaded not guilty. Judge Murray said he found no malice aforethought in the shooting. He reduced the charge to manslaughter. Mann was held in $5,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

Bryan Cancels Some Lectures

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Secretary Bryan announced today that he had cancelled his lecture engagements for the greater part of next week and would be in Washington all the time that Ambassador Wilson, who is on his way from Mexico, is here.

Restrain Attorney in Suit on Stock

Court Ruling Is in Favor of Hornblower & Weeks.

Judge Braley of the Supreme Judicial Court today ordered an injunction to issue restraining Roland S. Dow, an attorney, from prosecuting a suit brought in the Superior court against Hornblower & Weeks, wherein the plaintiff sought to recover $200,000 for alleged fraud and deceit on the part of Hornblower & Weeks in the sale of preferred stock of the Sealship Oyster System to Dow.

Dow also purchased from Hornblower & Weeks 1,100 shares of the common stock of the company, and on April 18, 1912, in consideration of the payment of $30 per share by Hornblower & Weeks, executed a release to that firm of all liability. On the back of the instrument was written these words, "General Release."

Sealed Indictment in the Lamar Case

Result of Federal Grand Jury Inquiry in New York.

NEW YORK, July 18.—It became definitely known here today that a sealed indictment had been returned to the United States Court charging a violation of the federal law in connection with certain transactions of David Lamar, the Wall Street manipulator, who admitted impersonating members of Congress to further his stock schemes.

For several days a federal Grand Jury has been hearing evidence how Lamar impersonated Congressman Riordan and others in furtherance of some of his schemes, notably the one to have Edward Lauterbach made counsel for the Union Pacific.

Mr. Lamar was not at his town house today, but servants said he was at his Summer home in Pittsfield, Mass.

William Rockefeller Again 'Comes Back'

No Sign of "Dangerous" Illness at New Haven Meeting.

NEW YORK, July 18.—William Rockefeller has shown for the second time within a week that he has "come back with a bang." Last Winter when the Pujo Committee was anxious to hear him, Rockefeller was supposed to be at death's door and certain to die if he exerted himself. At the meeting of the New Haven road directors, where President Mellen's resignation was received, Rockefeller appeared stalking and chipper. Jumping from his automobile he called out in a voice loud enough to be heard half a block:

"Be back here at 3 o'clock."

This led to the belief that he has "come back."

Gallinger Urges Tariff Referendum

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, today offered an amendment to the tariff bill, which read in part: "Resolved: That further consideration of the bill be postponed until the first Monday of December, 1914, and that in the meantime the bill be submitted to a referendum of the legal voters of the United States at the State and congressional elections to be held during that year."

CITY OF BANGOR IS DESTROYED BY FLAMES AT PIER

The Eastern Steamship Company's City of Bangor was practically destroyed by fire at her berth at Foster's Wharf today.

FIRE LEAPS UP IN SALOON.

Two alarms were sounded for the fire. The flames broke out amidships, in the saloon, and shot up through the varnished woodwork to the upper decks almost instantly. A hot-air explosion spread them more rapidly and the seventy-five workmen and stevedores aboard had to jump from the railing to the dock to escape.

The fire cut the boat in half, and a high wind carried it toward the bow. The entire forward part of the boat was apparently doomed.

Three fireboats fought the flames from the water, and nine engines from the land side. The fire threatened the company's freight shed and the Revere Beach and Lynn ferry on the other side.

Night Watchman Burton had a narrow escape. He was asleep on the hurricane deck near the pilot house, when he was awakened by the clanging of a bell.

Burton rushed out of his room to find a wall of flame all about him. Through this he plunged and jumped over the railing onto Otis wharf.

Here he was found to be suffering from severe burns about the neck, face and hands. He was taken to the Relief Hospital.

A dozen men employed in the fire and engine rooms were trapped by the flames. They rushed through smoke and blaze to the deck and jumped overboard. The police said they were unable to determine whether all the workers had escaped. It was not known whether all the men who had jumped overboard had been rescued by firemen and police.

The fire started in the oil room, which is below the water line. Thence it rapidly gained headway to the docks, and soon scores of the staterooms were ablaze.

It was thought the water poured into the ship from the fire hose might sink her. It was the belief of the firemen the craft was doomed. Efforts were made to prevent the flames from leaping to Otis Wharf which was endangered.

The fire is the second within a week on the City of Bangor. A week ago this afternoon flames were discovered in the forecastle. A still alarm was sounded. The damage at that time was slight.

The value of the steamer was estimated at 100,000.

The Bangor was scheduled to sail at 6 this afternoon for Bath and other Maine ports. A large amount of freight and baggage had been put aboard her today.

Airships May Now Alight on Wires

PARIS, July 18.—The French aviator, Louis Bleriot, announces successful trials of a system which will enable aeroplanes to alight like birds on a stretched cable, several yards above the ground, or along a ship's side. The aeroplane flies toward the cable in a parallel direction from below, and by an upward movement attaches itself by means of a mechanical device. The system is now undergoing a careful examination.

Two Derailed Cars Block New Haven

BERLIN, Ct., July 18.—North and south bound train were delayed on the New Haven road here today when both tracks were blocked by the derailing of two freight cars, which were part of a string attached to a local switcher. The accident happened at 7 o'clock and it was nearly noon before both tracks were cleared. No one was hurt.

The Hamburg American line officers today here have received a wireless from the steamship Cleveland, 60 miles off Boston Light. The Cleveland will dock at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

SMALL POX COUPLE ESCAPE PEST HOUSE.
BURLINGTON, Vt., July 18.—The police and health of-

LET THE NEW HAVEN DIRECTORS NOW RESIGN, SAYS BRANDEIS

Mr. Mellen's resignation alone will accomplish little, if anything; it should be accompanied by the retirement of the board of directors whose policies Mr. Mellen has carried out faithfully for nearly ten years.

It is these unwise and unfortunate policies which are the cause of the disastrous situation which confronts the stockholders of our New England railroads today.

The directors whose policies Mr. Mellen has been carrying out, are obviously not to be trusted to introduce those radical changes which the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended and which are essential to a restoration of the railroads to their former prosperity.—LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

In the year 1913, says modern opinion in the financial district, with tactics that used to "go" in the early '90's, but which have not been successful for some time and may never be successful again.

The retirement of Mellen means absolutely nothing in the New England transportation situation. Mr. Mellen's going will not take the mind and the eye of New England public opinion away from the "main issues."

What the public wants to know is what the real heads of the New Haven—its board of twenty-five directors—mean to do about some of the recommendations of the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The New Haven should divest itself of its trolley lines.

The Boston & Albany should be kept entirely free from New Haven control.

While there are twenty-five New Haven directors, a handful of them have run the railroad. Leading the handful have been J. P. Morgan, 2d, succeeding the first J. P. Morgan; William Rockefeller and, until he resigned a short time since, Lewis Ledyard of the "Morgan crowd."

Then there are Charles F. Brooker of Ansonia, head of the American Brass Company; George F. Baker, the New York banker, big in telephone and express; President Sidney W. Winslow of the United Shoe Machinery Company, and President Theodore N. Vail of the American [illegible], a stockholder and the Western Union.

The dominance of Pennsylvania Railroad sentiment in New England transportation is further indicated by the presence on the board of President Samuel Rea and Thomas De Witt Cuyler, one of his directors.

These are some of the gentlemen who set out to make New England transportation tributary to Wall Street. New England will not be free again until she has shaken off their grip.

Mr. Mellen's departure is an interesting incident. It will not, however, explain or remove the findings of the Interstate Commerce Board.

In whatever aspect the (Rhode Island trolley) transaction is viewed, the New Haven gave $13,500,000 for nothing.

Here, therefore, is an enterprise (the New York, Westchester & Boston, twenty miles long from White Plains to Harlem River), which cost the New Haven Company $12,000,000 in excess of the value of the property upon its own showing.

Upon the face of the transaction, therefore (Billard's "purchase" of the original holdings of Boston & Maine stock by the New Haven) Mr. Billard made, without the investment of a dollar, something over $2,700,000 as a result of this transaction.

Mr. Billard is today one of the New Haven directors.

All of which is to make no mention of the famous de luxe Hampden Railroad, 16 miles long, which the New Haven management has projected to "wish onto" the Boston & Maine at a rental of $200,000, or $12,500 per mile, the AVERAGE rental paid by the Boston & Maine being $3,300.

No one man is responsible for the New Haven record in New England for the past ten years. The going of President Mellen will not clean the slate.

A good time for New England and Wall street to ponder the statement of the Interstate Commerce Board:

But upon what terms is peace to be secured? In the past, the New Haven Company, which has now become the dominant factor and which is mainly to be considered, has proceeded in open violation of some laws and in disregard of the spirit, if not the letter, of others.

This comes upon the part of that company is primarily responsible for this unfortunate agitation. That agitation cannot stop, and ought not to stop, until its cause is removed. Any betterment of railroad conditions in New England must begin with the assurance that the New Haven management will act not only prudently, but, above all, within the letter and the spirit of the law.

MEN SUGGESTED FOR PRESIDENCY OF NEW HAVEN R.R.

HOWARD ELLIOTT, President, Northern Pacific R. R.
BENJAMIN CAMPBELL, vice-president, New Haven, in charge of traffic.
EDWARD D. ROBBINS, general counsel, New Haven.
MORRIS McDONALD, newly elected president, Boston & Maine.
SAMUEL HIGGINS, formerly general manager, New Haven.
B. L. WINCHELL, traffic manager, Union Pacific.
TIMOTHY E. BYRNES, vice-president, New Haven.
DANIEL WILLARD, president of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

DIRECTORS MUST FOLLOW MELLEN, DECLARES BRANDEIS

"While Mr. Mellen's resignation is dramatic," said Attorney Louis D. Brandeis on learning of the New Haven chief's retirement, "it is important mainly as a symptom of what must come. Mr. Mellen's resignation alone will accomplish little, if anything. It should be accompanied by the retirement of the board of directors whose policies Mr. Mellen has carried out faithfully for nearly ten years.

"The directors, whose policies Mr. Mellen has been carrying out, are obviously not to be trusted to introduce those radical changes which the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended and which are essential to a restoration of the railroads to their former prosperity.

"When the present directors retire, as they should do, just as soon as their successors can be elected there must be an entire reversal of policy. Instead of aggrandizement and monopoly, action must be taken in the first place to separate from the New Haven the trolley lines, as the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended. Then, the steamship lines which the New Haven acquired for the purpose of suppressing water competition, should be disposed of, as provided by the Panama Canal act, to which Commissioner Prouty referred in his opinion.

"Then the illegal partnership in the Boston and Albany should be abrogated, restoring such competition as that railroad formerly afforded. And, finally, there must be a complete separation of the Boston and Maine from the New Haven. All of these acts are essential to securing adequate transportation for New England and a return of prosperity to our transportation properties.

"The disaster which has overtaken the stockholders of these companies is the result of the most serious breach of trust ever committed in the United States.

"The present disastrous situation is the result of the erroneous policy of defying laws, federal and State, all the laws of prudent business, and the laws of human nature, which set a limit to what one man or a body of men can efficiently perform. The disaster which has come was the necessary result of errors of judgment on the part of the directors and through their representative, Mr. Mellen.

"Mr. Mellen must face the charges against him; there can be no evasion.

THE CAREWORN MR. MELLEN

This photograph, one of the latest of the retiring New Haven president, shows how deeply the burdens and troubles of railroad management have worn upon him of late.

Mellen's Disregard of Law, as Charged by the American, Worked His Final Undoing

It was the monopolistic policy of the Mellen regime fostered at the expense of operating efficiency that brought the New Haven to its present ill repute and worked the final undoing of an agent who carried out the policy outlined and approved by the directors.

The facts upon which the Interstate Commerce Commission based its arraignment of the New Haven policy—that the equipment, operating and maintenance charges of the road were greatly reduced in order to get money to buy competing trolleys, steamship and steam railway lines—have been frequently called to public attention by the Boston AMERICAN. At various times the AMERICAN has made these charges against the Mellen management of the New Haven and the New Haven's arraignment was fully sustained by the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission:

That the three crimes of the New Haven management were:

1—Gross disregard of the safety of passengers.

2—Gross waste of the railroad's income.

3—Criminal intent, at the expense of the public and of its own stockholders, to create a monopoly of railroads, trolleys and steamboats in defiance of law.

That although the New Haven has not had enough money to maintain its own tracks and equipment it has raised and spent more than $284,000,000 to create a monopoly in defiance of law.

That as an example of waste the Rhode Island trolley lines, sold to the New Haven by Charles S. Aldrich and his partners for $24,220,978, were worth about $6,000,000.

Again, that the New York, Westchester & Boston, carried at $21,020,004, was not worth more than $12,338,421, though it cost the New Haven $33,000,908.

That this money wasted in establishing a monopoly in defiance of law and corrupting legislators to legalize criminal acts already done should have gone into steel cars, perfected brakes and other devices for the protection of passengers.

In addition to these exposures the AMERICAN charged that:

Mellen flouted the anti-merger laws of Massachusetts.

Mellen rode rough shod over the Sherman anti-trust law.

Mellen introduced the "elastic mile" into American railroading, charging for "mileage" where there was none.

Mellen made promises to railroads and promptly broke them.

Mellen management demoralized the freight carriers on the Boston & Maine.

Mellen assumed to "own" the Connecticut River, insisting that freight which comes up the river to New Haven points must come in New Haven boats or be taken down to the mouth of the river and reloaded.

Mellen refused to let the Fabre line, between Italy and the United States, into Providence until its officials gave a pledge not to unload a pound of freight there. The Fabre line lands passengers at Providence, but carries Providence freight on to New York, to send it back by Mellen land or water routes.

Mellen killed off the best water service there ever was between New York and Boston, "acquiring" the Yale and Harvard and shipping them to the Pacific Coast.

Mellen roads buy their supplies from Mellen's clan, "Diamond Jim" Brady, The New England public pays the bill.

Mellen's lines buy their coal from a company owned in part by Mellen's friends or by another company owned in part by a New Haven director.

Boston & Maine buys freight car wheels from Kimball, one of the Boston & Maine directors, paying him a larger price than is charged by the biggest manufacturers in the country.

MELLEN GUILLOTINED BY BOARD TO APPEASE WRATH OF PUBLIC, FORBES SAYS

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

It was bound to come.

Having served them blindly, zealously in their monopoly mania, Charles S. Mellen has been guillotined by the Morgan interests. For have not the public risen up in their wrath and demanded satisfaction? And was not Mellen the employe, a convenient sop?

Do you know the ancient custom of selecting a scapegoat? The Morgan treatment of Mellen recalls it.

Once a year, on the day of atonement there was great gathering at the tabernacle. The high priest, anxious to find a means of getting rid of his own sins and the sins of the people went through the ceremony of transferring all the sins to a goat, which was then led far into the wilderness and deserted. It was the scapegoat.

In Mellen the Morgan people have found a scapegoat.

The AMERICAN recently told how the Morgan interests, alarmed over the uprising of the public and the roar of nearing thunder, were seeking to place blame upon their tool, Mellen, their paid employe and entirely subject to orders. The hint was dropped that Mellen would be made a scapegoat; that on Mellen would be laid the sins of the Morgan people and that he then would be deserted. And that is what has come to pass.

Guilty Must Suffer.

But scapegoats do not satisfy in these enlightened days. To lay one's own misdeeds on the back of another is not always efficacious. Twentieth century people are inclined to make guilty ones suffer for their offenses, to place blame where it rightly belongs. Mellen's puny critics are not quite ample enough to hide the big, powerful Morgan interests. Their heads, hands and feet are apt to stick out awkwardly.

The public is not easily deceived.

Not to Mellen but to Morgan did the public intrust over $3,000,000,000 new capital within the last few years for use in New England transportation development. Investors were not attracted by the name Mellen—but the name Morgan. New Haven was regarded as essentially a "Morgan road." It was because the house of Morgan, the greatest, strongest banking house in America was behind the New Haven that the public gave up so many millions for the company's use—abuse it really turns out to have been.

What Will the Public Do?

What are the Morgan people going to do about it?

What is the public going to do about it?

What is the Interstate Commerce Commission going to do about it?

What are the courts going to do about it?

The government's representatives, the Interstate Commerce Commission, after exhaustive investigation, find that millions were filched from the public's pocket. In the man who steals a loaf of bread to be jailed, but the responsible controller of a concern that spirits away millions to go scot free?

Is this justice? Is it democratic?

Are J. P. Morgan & Co., to be allowed to let the New Haven bubble, which they helped to blow, collapse? Is the old dodge of letting the road fall and then scooping in millions in reorganizing it to be attempted once again at this late day?

The house of Morgan used to be dubbed the "financial doctor," so many operations did it perform that were painful to patients, but profitable to the physician.

Gaby Wasn't Worth $90 to this Manuel

Gypsy Queen Promised New Bedford Man Dancer Would Be His Bride.

NEW BEDFORD, July 18.—Manuel Gomes went to a gypsy fortune teller. She told him many things that pleased him and each time she prophesied something more glowing than the first he crossed her palm with gold. The climax came when she told him Gaby Deslys would one day be his bride.

Gomes went into ecstasies and when he came out discovered his $90 was missing. Gomes immediately forgot all about Gaby and the millions that were coming to him and hunting up Inspector Sylvia asked him to get back his money. The gypsy outfit was held until Gomes' $90 reappeared. When it did the gypsy queen told Gomes he couldn't marry Gaby now. "I should worry," said Gomes and deposited the $90 in the bank.

Former Harvard Star in Romance

Howard Keays to Be Married to Cambridge Girl.

A romance in which a former athlete of Harvard and a pretty stenographer hold the centre of the stage has just been made public. Percival Howard Keays, the giant guard of the 1910 football team, has just applied at the city clerk's office in Cambridge for a license to wed Miss Olive May Kelley of North Cambridge. A mutual liking sprung up between the couple when Keays was a student at the Rindge Manual Training School and Miss Kelley was a pupil in the High School.

Keays came to Harvard in 1909. He played on his freshman eleven, was a member of the varsity squad in 1910 and 1911, during the last season playing a most brilliant game in the contest with the Carlisle Indians. He is the son of Charles Henry Kelley of Chicago. Miss Kelley is the daughter of John K. Kelley, a North Cambridge business man.

Entire Town Is on Meat Strike

NEW BRITAIN, Ct., July 18.—New-ington, a suburb with a population of about 1,500, has gone on a meat strike. The lone butcher has been forced to quit because housewives refuse to purchase his high-priced chops and steaks. The people declare they will eat no meat until prices drop.

MISS FLOSSIE BROWN,

ordered out of Richmond, Va., for wearing slit skirt shown in the photograph.

Many Cities Want Slit Skirt Weare

Miss Brown, Who Had to Leave Richmond, Gets Many Invitations.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Dispatches from Richmond, Va., state that Miss Flossie Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefer to be known, is coming to the city to wear the flimsy slit skirt that caused her to be fined $25 in Richmond and to be ordered to leave town within twenty-four hours.

The announcement has caused several cities to extend informal invitations to the shapely young woman. The police of Pittsburgh declare they would welcome a slit skirt wearer. Marshal Farnan has intimated that Miss Brown will not be molested in Baltimore.

Coffin Lowered Out of Window

300-Pound Body of West End Suicide Too Big for Stairs.

Andrew Bialas' body was lowered from the second story window of his former home at No. 303 Cambridge street, West End, when his funeral was held today. He weighed over three hundred pounds and a special coffin was constructed for him. The coffin was too large to come down the stairs. Bialas committed suicide by jumping into the Charles River Basin.

WOMEN RIDE ACCUSED WIFE OUT UPON RAIL

VOLO, Ill., July 18.—Mrs. John Richardson, an accused wife, bound hand and foot to a long fence rail, was ridden out of town by a mob of angry women, who hurled mud and stones at her until she fainted.

When she revived she was commanded to leave town. William Dunell, a brother-in-law, was ordered by citizens to take himself out of the place.

Richardson, who conducts one of the largest stores here, is an invalid. He recently accused his wife and Dunell. He ordered his wife to leave his home and went to Waukegan to consult an attorney about a divorce. Mrs. Richardson's action while her husband was away caused great indignation.

The women gathered about the Richardson home. Mrs. Richardson stepped out in the yard. She was seized by her neighbors, and after a short struggle she was tied with a rope. A fence rail was produced, to which she was strapped down astride. Then she was carried through the streets while the husband and brothers looked on.

After the frightful episode she accepted a sum of money from her husband and left town.

ECZEMA LIKE WATER BLISTERS
On Face and Ears, Itched and Burned. Disfigured, Could Not Go Anywhere. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Few Weeks.
280 Torrey St., Brockton, Mass.—"Eczema began on my son's face and ears something like a rash. Later it became like water blisters. They itched and burned so badly the child made sores. The trouble disfigured him for the time being; he could not go anywhere. It troubled him to lie on his ears. He was cross and fretful and restless.
"I tried ——, ——, —— and several other salves but none of them did any good. The trouble lasted two or three years off and on before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used to wash the sores with warm water and Cuticura Soap and then put on the Cuticura Ointment and they afforded relief right away. It was only a few weeks till the cure was complete." (Signed) Mrs. J. W. Gillis, Jan. 16, 1912.
FOR PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS
The following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."
Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

ALLIES WILL DICTATE TERMS TO BULGARIANS

ATHENS, July 18.—According to our present plans the armies of Greece, Servia and Roumania will march into Sofia and we will dictate terms of Bulgarian peace in Czar Ferdinand's own drawing room."

This statement was made here today by Premier Venizelos, who has just returned from Saloniki. Mr. Venizelos declared that one of the principal reasons why the allies were determined to humble Bulgaria in the dust is that the Bulgarians have been guilty of unspeakable atrocities in Macedonia.

"No armistice will be accepted if our agreement is carried out," said Mr. Venizelos. "Greece, Servia and Roumania are in accord on this campaign. Our armies will march upon Sofia, where they will concentrate.

Declares Blood Must Pay.

"King Constantine is at Saloniki, having gone there from Kavala. He is determined that blood must pay for the savagery of the Bulgarians. Our Greek army is pushing northeastward. The Servians are moving southeastward and the Roumanians are marching westward. The remnants of the Bulgarian army are being shoved toward Sofia, and when we surround the city the entire fighting force of the Bulgars will be penned up there."

Dispatches from Sofia state that a revolutionary plot against the life of Czar Ferdinand was discovered today by the Bulgarian police. The conspiracy was hatched by political malcontents who planned to assassinate Czar Ferdinand in the palace, where he has been keeping in seclusion since last Saturday, when mobs stoned the government buildings.

Russian Strengthens Forts.

Only a few months ago Czar Ferdinand was hailed by his people as a national hero. A new Bulgarian Cabinet was formed today with Radestawoff, a liberal, as Premier.

Servians today occupied the Bulgar town of Isvor, fifty miles northeast of Sofia.

Messages received from Cracow, Austria, declare that several regiments of Russian troops have been posted along the Austro-Russian frontier. Reports received from local military authorities have stated that the Russians are strengthening the border forts.

From Constantinople comes the report that another barbarous outrage by Bulgarian troops was reported there today by the Turkish government. The retreating Bulgarians are said to have burned 950 houses in Hairebolu with all their occupants. Nearly 3,000 are believed to have perished. All the dead are Mussulmen.

Government Has an Anti-Thin Cure

Mysterious Compound to Fatten Army Candidates.

CHICAGO, July 17.—The government will make you fat if you will join the army.

This is the promise of Lieutenant-Colonel William L. Kenly, supervisor of the army recruiting service and president of the Field Artillery Examining Board, who has come to Chicago. With him he brought a bottle, the first anti-thin emulsion ever introduced by the United States government. Its purpose, the colonel explained, is to get into the army the thousands of men who, otherwise fit, are barred by reason of their light weight.

Militant Is Freed by Hunger Strike

LONDON, July 18.—Miss Annie Kenney, leader of the militant suffragettes and organizer of the Women's Social and Political Union, who was sentenced on June 17 to eighteen months for malicious destruction of property and conspiracy, was released today because of illness induced by a food and water strike.

Miss Helen Jolly, the secretary of the Liverpool branch of the Woman's Social and Political Union, was fined $20 at Liverpool today.

Fisher in Boston on Postal Changes

A. A. Fisher, chief clerk to the Second Assistant Postmaster General was in Boston today in conference with Superintendent John W. Holliday of the New England division of the railway mail service, and changes in the service are expected to develop. They discussed plans for parcel post terminals at the North and South stations. From here, Fisher goes to Springfield, Providence and New Haven for the same purpose.

TELLS WIFE TO KEEP SECRETS FROM "HUBBY"

Wives! Don't tell all your secrets to your husbands.

Don't lose your independence by so doing.

It's only the wise wife that knows what secret to keep from her husband and make him happy.

So declares Mrs. Charlotte Smith, head of the National Homestead Association, whose headquarters are at No. 120 Boylston street. This association is studying to find out what makes happy homes. It has discovered that if a wife tells her husband everything it is a lesson to him not to tell his wife all his secrets.

Mrs. Smith says that men could not tell all their secrets if they tried. It is their nature to conceal. It is a woman's nature to reveal herself.

Mrs. Smith says:

Why should a wife tell all her secrets to her husband?

Do you think that one husband in a thousand tells his wife everything?

It is all very well for these husbands to demand that wives shall tell them everything, but a wife is really a fool if she lets her husband know everything. That's my opinion.

Many divorces are occasioned by married couples knowing too much of each other. They magnify the secrets when they are known and make too much of them. So it is best all round not to tell everything you know to your husband. It saves trouble and heartbreaks.

It is better that husband and wife keep their own council on many things. Silence is golden, you know. This shows up with good effect in the married life at times.

You take young couples. They think that they must tell each other everything. But details loom up and are often magnified.

"Hubby" gets irked, goes out and slams the door, wife just buries her head in her hands and sobs. If they had just kept still and said nothing about that particular matter it would have been much better.

Don't understand me as saying husband and wife should do things on the sly and lose each other's confidence. That's not it at all.

'Annex Mexico,' Says Lord Rothschild

Great Banker Would Be Glad of United States Control.

LONDON, July 18.—Lord Rothschild in an interview with the AMERICAN expressed in two sentences the sentiment of the business community in London toward Mexico and the attitude of the United States.

"I have not touched Mexican affairs for years," said Lord Rothschild, "I have never trusted them, and trust them still less today. Nobody can appreciate better than I the thought that bondholders and people having interests in Mexico would be only too glad to see the United States annex Mexico.

"I don't want to express an opinion on the policy the United States should pursue. But it is a fact that enormous sums of money have been invested in that country and that still another rumpus appears likely. It is plain to anyone that anarchy won't help those who have contributed so largely to the country's commercial exploitation."

Prince of Monaco Outlines U. S. Trip

Expects to Do Some Deep Sea Dredging.

PARIS, July 18.—The Prince of Monaco has explained through his scientific assistant and aide de camp, Captain Bouree, his plans to visit the United States.

"About July 22," said Captain Bouree, "the Prince will sail from Havre on his yacht Hirondelle for the Azores. He will have with him his scientific staff and will take command.

"His Highness is a thorough sailor, besides being a great hunter and distinguished savant. From the Azores, where he expects to do some deep sea dredging, the Prince will go to the banks of Newfoundland and thence to New York, in September.

TARIFF TO CUT COST OF LIVING SAYS SIMMONS

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The report of Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, on the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill as amended by the Senate Committee, was placed before the members of the upper House at noon today and debate on the measure immediately was begun.

In a brief introduction, Senator Simmons expressed the belief that the Senate bill, if enacted into law, "Will result in an equitable distribution of burdens, and will tend to disintegrate monopolies built up under a protective tariff, will reduce the cost of living and will increase the opportunities of the individual citizen."

The total outcome of the Senate tariff inlaws is a decrease of 27.64 per cent. under the Payne-Aldrich tariff rates and of 4.22 per cent. under the House tariff rates. Nevertheless the report predicts that the business of the government will be run at a profit. The official figures, based upon compilations of treasury experts for the fiscal year 1913, place the total revenue, exclusive of the possible revenue from the Panama Canal, the sinking fund and the national bank note redemption fund, at $696,810,000, against an estimated disbursement of $694,700,000 for the same period. This would leave a surplus of $2,020,000.

Schlitz Brown Bottle Claims Authenticated

by Dr. Robert Wahl, President of the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology. We reprint from his letter.

"Our observations, extending over the last twenty-five years, have convinced us beyond a doubt that exposure of beer to light has a very detrimental influence on its quality generally, but especially upon the flavor of the beer.

We have tested beers repeatedly in this direction, placing the bottles into direct sunlight, and testing the same after one, two, three and five minutes exposure, found that the beer with three and five minutes exposure became undrinkable, on account of the peculiar odor developed.

The detrimental effect of light upon beer can be successfully counteracted by the employment of brown or dark colored glass bottles, and such bottles are therefore recommendable."

He quotes famous authorities to corroborate his opinion

Authorities on the subject of the detrimental influence of light on beer are:

C. Lintner, Lehrbuch der Bierbrauerei 1875, S. 343.
Beck, Zeitschrift für das gesamte Brauwesen, 1882, S. 370.
V Huth Der Bierbrauer 1876, S. 127.
Ney, Allg. Zeitschr. f. Bierbr. u. Malzfabr., 1878, S. 273

Light cannot harm Schlitz in Brown Bottles. It is made pure and then kept pure.

ORDER INQUIRY INTO ARRESTS OF 6 CHILDREN

Early next week the committee on public safety of the Somerville board of aldermen will begin an official investigation of the recent arrest and detention of the O'Neil children, who were taken from school by uniformed policemen and driven to the police station in the patrol wagon.

The committee on public safety has been given full latitude and authority to get at the truth of this municipal scandal and will recommend measures to prevent a repetition of such disgraceful and inhuman treatment of innocent children.

Aldermen William T. McCarthy of Ward one, one of the youngest and most energetic members of the board, introduced the order which was unanimously adopted.

Here is the order:

"The committee on public safety is hereby requested to investigate the manner in which children of Thomas J. O'Neil were taken from the Carr and Durell schools and the circumstances under which they were placed in custody by the police authorities and report their findings to this Board at the first meeting in August."

The widespread indignation aroused by the experience of the O'Neil children is illustrated in the announcement today by Representative Thomas J. Casey of South Boston that he will introduce a bill before the next Legislature making such treatment of children illegal. He says he put such in last session and that it passed both branches, but was vetoed by Governor Foss. Casey claims the House and Senate were about to pass the measure over the Governor's veto when Representative Underhill of Somerville, who opposed pure food laws, started a fight that defeated it.

Alderman Makes Protest.

Representative Casey's bill will provide that: "destitute or abandoned children shall not be transported in patrol wagons to police stations or police courts, unless arrested for or convicted of an offence."

The McCarthy order was carried in seven minutes. It had the approval of twenty of the twenty-one members of the board. Alderman Alfred J. Toomey was unavoidably absent.

In offering his order Alderman McCarthy said:

"I wish to say a few words to justify the introduction of this order. On June 25, at the instigation of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the Somerville police went in search of certain children.

"Acting upon instructions from a police official in high authority the patrol wagon was driven to two public schools in our city, backed up at the entrances and children were taken from their classrooms during school hours.

"These innocent children, who had violated no law and who were entitled to full protection and courtesy, were disgraced and humiliated before their schoolmates. They were taken to a police station and detained.

Blames the Police.

"The law should protect the children of the poor and the lowly as well as the children of the rich. It seems at the first flush that the cloak of protection is not thrown around the poor, but it should be. It must be.

"These poor little ones were carted through the streets like criminals, and we have a high police official putting himself on record in the public prints with the bold assertion that if the occasion is presented he would do the same thing again.

WATSON ASKS CITY TO BUILD AN ICE PLANT

What Do You Know About the Ice Trust?

If you have information of any ice trust;

If you know of any undue raise in price or unjust discrimination on the part of any ice dealer;

If you know anything of a combination to raise or maintain prices or to divide territory

Send your statement of facts to the Editor, the Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.

James A. Watson of the Boston City Council has drafted an order calling for the erection and outfitting of a municipal plant for the manufacture and sale of ice by the city. He informs the Boston AMERICAN that he will introduce this order at the next meeting of the Council, which is set for July 28.

"At the last Council meeting," he said, "I introduced a resolution asking for Corporation Counsel Corbett's opinion as to the legality of the manufacture and sale of ice at cost by the city. The order I shall next offer will be another step toward what all thinking citizens hope earnestly to effect in time."

Councilman Watson has not yet officially received Attorney Corbett's reply, which is in the hands of Mayor Fitzgerald, but he has read it over. "I cannot see where it declares ice making or ice selling by the city either unconstitutional or illegal," he insists. "It is true that he quotes nine court decisions regarding the constitutionality of the city's dealing in other articles, but ice is a different matter.

"The question resolves itself to this: If the city can sell liquid water, why can't it freeze the water and sell it? Freezing does not convert the water into a new element. It merely changes the temperature.

Brookline Sealer Fights Ice Frauds

Sealer of Weights and Measures Willard E. Wood of Brookline today had distributed by the police, to every householder in Brookline, a printed circular relative to the sale and delivery of ice. In it he requests the co-operation of every citizen in the crusade against short weight. He also asks as a personal favor that each customer demand that the ice be weighed in their presence. He states that his department stands ready to prosecute to the full extent in any case where sufficient evidence can be obtained.

Emmanuel Church Closed for Summer

Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Newbury street, of which the Rev. Dr. Elwood Worcester is rector, will be closed the rest of the Summer and will reopen the first Sunday in September. This is the third church in the Back Bay to be closed during the Summer, the others being the First Baptist Church on Commonwealth avenue and the First Church in Boston (Unitarian), on Marlboro street.

Baby Conference at Milk Station

The new milk station of the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association, opened last week in the Roxbury Neighborhood House, has just held its first baby conference. Dr. William W. Howell, the physician in charge, saw twenty-seven little babies and advised their mothers just how to keep them well during the hot weather.

Cavanagh Says He Will Not Withdraw

Ex-Representative James F. Cavanagh of Everett, who has come out for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, said today that he would not withdraw in favor of a "Worcester County man," who was reported to be about to announce his candidacy. "I am in the field to stay and I expect to get the nomination," he said.

Warrant Out for Girl's Assailant

Officer Shay of Quincy today secured a John Doe warrant for the assailant of Alli Kukkanen, a girl of sixteen, who was attacked on her way home last night. Shay believes he knows the assailant.

DR. RICHARDSON ADMITS LAXITY OF STATE BOARD

The AMERICAN, during its campaign to effect a reorganization of the State Board of Health, has several times criticized the official acts of Dr. Mark W. Richardson, the secretary. Mr. Cassidy tells you today of Dr. Richardson's attempted defence yesterday before the legislative recess committee investigating tuberculosis.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Dr. Mark W. Richardson replied to the criticism of his official acts before the legislative recess committee on tuberculosis yesterday.

Dr. Richardson had been criticized for not devoting his entire time to his duties. He gets a salary of $5,000 a year. He has been criticized for delegating too much of his work to assistants. He has been criticized for not having a live grasp on the general and specific problems relating to the enforcement of public health laws; also for allowing his work as a life insurance examiner to interfere with his duties as the paid secretary of the State Board of Health.

Takes State's Time.

Here are a few of the things Dr. Richardson admitted under the persistent questioning of Representatives Haines and Keenan.

Since he became secretary of the State Board of Health in 1909 he has given two hours daily to examining cases for a life insurance company at $5 a case.

He admitted one hour of the State's time for which he receives $5,000 a year was devoted to the insurance work.

He believed were he to give his whole time to State work he ought to receive $7,000 a year.

He admitted he didn't consider his insurance work injured his opportunities to perform his State work.

He admitted he had never but in one instance notified the Attorney-General that twenty-one cities and scores of towns had failed to comply with the law compelling them to erect tuberculosis hospitals.

Board Has No Expert.

He admitted the State Board of Health has no member who is an expert on tuberculosis.

He admitted that the bulk of the board's work was done by him, thereby inferring he was responsible for any failure of the board to enforce health laws.

He explained that only two members—Dr. Wolcott, the chairman, and Hiram F. Mills, the oldest member in years of service—took an active part in the work of the board.

In response to a question by Representative Haines, Dr. Richardson agreed that the only result accomplished for the checking of tuberculosis in two years was a single hospital erected in Fitchburg.

"How do you know your medical inspectors are doing their work?" asked Representative Keenan.

"We have to take their word for it," said Dr. Richardson.

Will Appear Again.

Dr. Richardson was requested by Representative Haines to bring to the committee all correspondence between the State Board of Health and the local boards showing requests made of local boards to build tuberculosis hospitals according to law. Representative Haines notified Dr. Richardson he would put him under oath at his appearance next Thursday.

Dr. Wolcott was notified through Dr. Richardson to appear before the committee next Thursday.

REP. FREDERICK H. BURKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

This is a Democratic member of the Legislature who was faithful both to the interests of his party and of his State this year.

When the Democratic party declared: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS, AND WE BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FURTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH," Mr. Burke knew that, as a Democrat, he was bound to obey that declaration. Also, as an honest and intelligent public servant, he knew that it was against the interests of the State to allow the New Haven Railroad monopoly to grab the Street Railways of this Commonwealth. It is not through the misconduct of Mr. Burke that the Democratic party is disgraced before the voters of the Commonwealth.

The AMERICAN commends the example of Mr. Burke to those other Democrats who betrayed their party platform and surrendered to the railroad lobby in defiance of every honest and intelligent reason.

REVERE WILL GET THE TRUTH, WARNS WHITE

Chairman Walter T. White of the Revere Selectmen today replied to the statement of Selectman Bruno Hartung that the latter will train his "verbal batteries" on the former if the chairman seeks the removal of Police Chief Chainey at the meeting of the Selectmen Wednesday night.

"I will be right there to receive this battery," said Chairman White. "I am willing to stand back of my action, and, while I may not be supported, the truth is bound to come out. The townspeople are going to have an opportunity of learning the whole situation. I am going to ask for Chainey's resignation, and if he doesn't wish to resign, then I shall press all my charges against him."

Chief Chainey, who is accused of neglecting to raid the Lynnway Club and other "illegal resorts," says he doesn't intend to resign.

It was stated that an arrest will be made probably tomorrow in connection with the raiding by Chairman White of the Lynnway Club, following a report to the Chelsea police court of the results of the seizure of liquors at the club.

CHAIRMAN WALTER T. WHITE of Revere Selectmen, who demands resignation of Acting Police Chief Chainey.

Parrot "Rex" Causes Jamaica Plain Row

"Rex," a screaming parrot, brought about a Jamaica Plain neighborhood unpleasantness, as a result of which, three Jamaica Plain women were in court, and one was fined $10.

Mrs. Susan E. Prouty of No. 10 Oakdale street, owns the parrot. Mrs. Margaret Stavers of the same address objects to his screaming. Mrs. Prouty, her daughter, Mrs. Seaverns, and the parrot, were out on their porch the other day. Mrs. Stavers was watering the lawn below. The parrot began to scream.

Mrs. Stavers suddenly cried: "Take that bird in before it gets wet."

The two simply looked at her, astonished. Then, they say, she pointed the hose toward the bird and drenched it—and when they protested, gave them a dose of the same. Mrs. Stavers was appealed from to $10 fine.

Rockefeller Shows He Has Recovered

NEW YORK, July 18.—William Rockefeller, who escaped inquisition by the Pujo committee because his physicians declared his life would be endangered if he were compelled to talk, took an active part in the discussion with the New Haven Railroad directors. It is the second time within a week that he has given evidence of having completely recovered.

$50,000 Reward for Stolen Necklace

International Thieves Believed to Have Known of Shipment.

LONDON, July 18.—A reward of $50,000 has been offered for the arrest of the international jewel thieves who secured the $750,000 pearl necklace sent here from Paris for an American purchaser.

Henry Salamans, Max Mayer's Paris agent, says the necklace was placed in a white wood box about the size of a cigar box, wrapped in linen and sealed with seven seals stamped with the letter "M."

The box arrived here with nine seals, the two additional ones having been put on the package to conceal the damage done in removing the gems.

Some experts believe the necklace has gone to the Far East, most probably through the Suez Canal, but if it enters Asia, probably it is lost forever.

The only clew is the description supplied by a waiter of the man who went to a Paris cafe on Tuesday, ordered coffee and pocketed several lumps of sugar. It may be this sugar that was substituted for the pearls.

EDITOR GWYN OF CHURCHMAN TO BE OUSTED

Rev. Herbert R. Gwyn, editor of the Churchman, the religious weekly of the Episcopal Church and published in New York city, has been urged to resign his $5,000 position. Two months ago he left a rectorship in Chicago and took up his editorial work. Boston Episcopalians forced his resignation.

He was hired by the board of directors of which George Zabriskie of New York is president, to oppose in his editorials the proposed change in the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church to "American Catholic Church."

Editor Gwyn surprised everyone by advocating that the name of the church be changed at the forthcoming general convention in New York in October and in so doing struck a hornet's nest.

WIN A VACATION! PARASOL GIRL AT NANTASKET

Again! ! ! ! !

You have a chance for vacation money! ! ! ! !

Will $150 be enough? ? ? ?

Here it is! ! !

At least, here's the recipe for getting it! !

Go to Nantasket Beach next Sunday. Go by trolley or boat or train—or walk. But go!

Then wait till you see a girl with a Green Parasol.

You'll see her picture in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Go up to her.

Fix her with a commanding eye.

Say sternly:

"You are the Lady with the Green Parasol."

At the same time wave before her a copy of the Sunday AMERICAN that you will have bought on the way down.

If she IS the Lady with the Green Parasol she will give you a little card.

It will read:

"Pay Mr. You $150 for finding the Lady with the Green Parasol."

Or something like that.

You bring the card to the AMERICAN office Monday.

The auditor writes out an order for $150.

Those in authority countersign it.

You cash it at the cashier's office.

Then you go home.

All persons will provide their own body guards, to prevent being robbed after receiving the money.

You can go to Nantasket:

By steamboats from Rowe's Wharf—the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company runs boats every half-hour.

Or

By trolley from Brockton or Quincy.

The Lady with the Green Parasol will arrive at Nantasket at 2. She will walk up to Paragon Park. At 3 she will see the sea lions fed.

Then she will see the Merry-go-Round, and ride.

And she will see the two Roller Coasters, and ride.

And she will see the Circle Swing, and ride.

And she will see the Scenic Temple, and ride.

And she will see the Roulette Wheel, and ride or play, or whatever you do.

Provided, of course, YOU don't see her first.

If you do, she'll come home, and you'll come to the office next day and get three $50 bills—or thirty-fives if you prefer.

CROCKETT ON CAMPAIGN FOR LITTLEFIELD

Dr. George L. Crockett of Thomaston, Me., makes a very remarkable reply to the Mulhall charges that he received money from the National Manufacturers' Association to elect Congressman Littlefield and to defeat Congressman McGillicuddy. Dr. Crockett recalls some of the most intimate political transactions of the period in question. Dr. Crockett says:

It was in 1906, after the congressional campaign in question had opened, that I first saw Mulhall. He was brought to my house by Charles Harriman of Rockland, who had been interested with me in labor matters. Harriman wanted me to indorse him to Mulhall, which I did after a fashion. I was told that the Colonel was down to help defeat McGillicuddy and elect Littlefield, and that it was for the N. A. M.

Organized the Tigers.

Inasmuch as this was turning out to be an anti-Gompers fight and I was lined up that way, it was natural I should be interested and take hold as I did. This was in July. Harriman at once went to work. The first line was to have him start an independent organization of workingmen which became known as the Tigers.

This was my idea, but Mulhall claimed it, as he did all sorts of things. We had a regular headquarters and we were supposed to be with Littlefield in appreciation of his merits. Some work was done in this camp, but I never thought very much, but in the end, anyway, there was a presentation of a gold watch to Harriman.

Against Gompers.

I have been and am against Samuel Gompers, because he has helped to kill organized labor in Knox County. I know some will snivel at that, but I have held a union card as a paving stone cutter. I was a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1902 and I wanted a good lease, and I thought we would use labor. I wrote to Jim Duncan of the A. F. of L., letting him know who I was and setting forth the need of organization, and he wrote back to go ahead and organize Knox County and he named me as parliamentary instructor for that purpose.

Altogether I figure that about $70,000 was spent in that campaign.

I think I should say in justice to myself that my switch on McGillicuddy was in part because of Bryan and Hearst.

Hearst did not like him because of a personal matter at the convention, and Bryan did not like him for something he had done in his case. Thus both men approved of my course, peculiar as it may have seemed.

200 Egg Inspectors Hold Mass Meeting

Nearly 200 Egg Inspectors of Boston held a mass meeting at Wells Memorial Hall last night and took steps to make their new organization more active. Addresses were made by Frank H. McCarthy of the American Federation of Labor, Henry Abrahams of the Boston Central Labor Union, James Moriarity of the Boston Central Labor Union and Patrick J. Donlon, a representative of the Egg Candlers' Union of Chicago.

Salmon Valued at $5,000 Cast in Sea

DEMOCRATS TO FIGHT FOR RULE IN LEGISLATURE

Democratic majorities in both Senate and House for 1914 was the keynote struck by Democrats all over the State gathered at the City Club to discuss practical plans.

Representative Peter Tague of Charlestown presided. Every county of the State was represented. It was pointed out by officials of the Democratic State Committee that the present Democratic representation in the State Senate could be increased from fourteen to twenty-one. That would give the Democrats a majority. In the house thirty districts were so close last year, that early and persistent effort from now until election day is hoped to place these districts in the Democratic column and give the Democrats a majority in the House.

Chairman Thomas P. Riley of the State Committee and Secretary of State Frank J. Donahue urged continuous action and the formation of auxiliary clubs.

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh was urged for the Democratic nomination for Governor, with second place to go to Arthur Lyman, if he should consent to become a candidate.

Maine Potato Men Score Rate Raise

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The Potato Receivers' Association and the Aroostook Potato Shippers Association, corporations of Maine, have filed a complaint against five steamship companies and thirty other water and rail transportation lines in which the rates on potatoes from Maine to various Southeastern States are attacked. It is alleged that advances recently allowed by the commission are at least 50 per cent. too high.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Henry and Ed. Habich, Rhode Island and Massachusetts distributors of the Cole, left Boston yesterday to attend a conference on the standardization of the Cole, at Indianapolis today and tomorrow. This conference is of deep interest to the automobile trade in general and the owner in particular, for the reason that it is believed that standardization is the solution of the problem of getting the best car for less money.

The Cole Motor Car Company called the conference in order that its leading officials might come in closer touch with the distributors as well as the producers. The Habich boys will remain through the conference, returning the first of next week.

D. C. French at Work on Longfellow Bust

STOCKBRIDGE, July 18.—Daniel Chester French, who, with Mrs. French, has just celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding, is at work on a memorial for the Longfellow house in Cambridge. It will be a bust of the poet, at the time when he was producing his best work, with a background representing one of the poet's ideas.

Mrs. Livingston Accuses Husband

Wife of Columbia Professor Asks Divorce; Charges Cruelty.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Affidavits filed in the Supreme Court yesterday were the first intimation that Prof. Albert Arthur Livingston, associate professor of Romance languages and literature in Columbia University, is defendant in a suit for separation brought by his wife, Mrs. Laura Manley Livingston. Mrs. Livingston charged her husband with cruelty and said he assaulted her several times. She accused him of abandoning domestic happiness for a club whose members believe in free love and said he proposed that she give him the evidence upon which he could divorce her or permit him to supply to her the evidence with which she could get a decree.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 18.—Five amateur marksmen were tied for first place in the Eastern handicap, the feature event of the eighth annual eastern handicap tournament, which was to have been concluded yesterday when darkness prevented further competition.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Although the National and American League races are far from ended, Ban Johnson and other members of the National Commission have already began to plan for the 1913 world series. Johnson says that in the event the Giants and Athletics win in their respective leagues the games will be played in New York and Philadelphia on alternate days.

Recruit Baseman Ted Cathers and Left Fielder Lee Magee of the Cardinals are wearing bruises and scratches today as the result of an old-fashioned fist fight in which they indulged during the Giants-Cardinals double-header. Little-Pell Finish with Clean Slate

NEW YORK, July 18.—Playing in splendid form, R. D. Little and T. R. Pell, the two former international players, finished their part in the division competitions in the Westchester doubles on the turf of the Country Club without a defeat. They closed their clean slate by defeating W. J. Clothier, the former national champion, and G. C. Caner, at 6—4, 6—4.

Prior to this match Clothier and Caner defeated G. L. Wrenn, Jr., and C. F. Watson, Jr., 6—4, 10—8. After this Wrenn and Watson defeated C. H. Jackson and J. B. Cornell. In the other division C. M. Bull, Jr., and L. E. Mahan defeated H. N. Rawlins and G. T. Adee at 6—4, 6—2.

Robert Leroy and W. M. Washburn, who did not compete today, are the leaders in this division. They stand undefeated and appear likely to meet Little and Pell for the cups.

Lynch Rules Dropped Ball as a Balk

NEW YORK, July 18.—President Lynch of the National League has sent the following notice to all club managers:

"League umpires have been instructed to enforce rule 34, section 1, as follows:

"If, with one or more runners on the bases, the pitcher (either by accident or intent) drops the ball while in the act of delivering same to batsman or in any other manner, the umpire will call a 'balk' of the above."

Free Baseball Tickets for You, Fans! Root for Red Sox! Root for Braves!

If you hold one of the numbered baseball checks which the AMERICAN has distributed broadcast, it would be well for you to closely scan the sport pages of the AMERICAN'S Sporting Extra Edition today, tomorrow and every day until further notice.

Every one of the small checks which have been, and are being distributed, is numbered. The AMERICAN prints, each day, in the Sporting Extra Edition 100 duplicate numbers. If you hold a check, all you have to do is to compare the number printed on it with the list of numbers printed in the Sporting Extra Edition each day and, when a duplicate of the number you hold appears in the AMERICAN, it entitles you to a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Pilgrims' games—take your choice, it costs you nothing.

"Standing room only" is the watchword at Fenway Park, and at the Walpole street grounds these days, but holders of AMERICAN numbered checks do not have to stand up, as the tickets now being issued entitle the holders to a grandstand seat at any game and at any time during the season of 1913.

Remember, all you have to do is to watch the daily list in the Sporting Extra Edition of the AMERICAN, and when a duplicate of the number you hold appears, bring or send same to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Braves' games on the home grounds.

If YOU haven't yet obtained any of these checks, ask your newsdealer or newsboy, who will be glad to supply you.

Checks may also be obtained at AMERICAN Promotion Department.

Watch your numbers carefully. If your number does not appear today it may tomorrow. When it does, it means a free Red Sox or Pilgrim ticket for you.

Michigan Teams in 20-Inning Tie Game

ADRIAN, Mich., July 18.—Battle Creek and Adrian, the leading teams in the Southern Michigan League, played twenty innings to a tie, each scoring one run before darkness ended the struggle.

Both pitchers showed wonderful control, Loomis of Adrian, a right-hander, struck out nineteen batters and lasted one pass, purposely, in the nineteenth inning. McDonald, a southpaw, fanned sixteen men and passed no one.

THE ARSON TRUST

Having been exposed, and some of the professionals sent to jail, you may now look for other schemes of all sorts to cheat and deceive the people. One of the latest is to make believe fail in business, have a "trustee" appointed, and advertise all kinds of "trustee" and other sales at 25 or 40 cents on the dollar.

In one of these we find exactly the same dress suit case that we sell at $4.00 marked $7.00, which they tell the customer is marked down from $14.00; another we sell at $3.25, their "marked down" price is $4.50. We find this is exactly the same in certain sales of boots and shoes and other goods. Let us assure you that there is no stock of leather bags in the country that will not bring at auction more than fifty cents on the dollar, and no ordinary stock of boots and shoes in the country that will not sell at auction for fifty cents or more on the dollar; therefore, whenever you hear of such goods being sold at twenty-five or forty cents on the dollar at retail you may rest assured that it is a Fake, and why such persons are not punished for obtaining money under false pretences and for fraud is more than we can understand.

Let us also assure you that there is not now and never was a stock of reliable bags and dress suit cases offered to the people at anywhere near such low prices as we are now selling the great wholesale stock from 28 Reade St., New York. We were compelled to stop shipping these goods for a time, but following is a list of shipments up to date, with many more to follow:

June 20, 29 cases; June 23, 31 cases; June 24, 23 cases; June 25, 12 cases; July 12, 12 cases; July 14, 30 cases; July 15, 19 cases; July 17, 12 cases.

We are always pleased to meet fair and honest competition, but if the Chamber of Commerce does not stop the sort of business referred to above, we think it is time for this institution to go out of business, and the merchants connected with the same establish a real "merchants'" association, which will not be controlled by contractors, lawyers and notorious politicians.

Yours truly, RAYMOND.

RED SOX RESUME SERIES WITH TIGERS AT DETROIT TODAY

Tad Makes It Clear That Heinie Has the Right Dope on Art of Slugging 'Em Out

Position at the Plate Factor in Batting

This is the second of a series of articles by Heine Zimmerman, the noted Cub batsman, on "How to Hit the Ball."

By HENRY ZIMMERMAN.

One of the questions which is being constantly hurled at me is: "Heine, what would you rather hit?"

Of course, every batter has his favorite ball and almost every batter has his weakness.

I would rather hit a curve ball than anything else. I prefer it to a fast one, and it certainly gives me more pleasure to hit at a hook than it does to swipe at a slow one. If the old days when you could call for what you wanted were in vogue, I would address the pitcher in this way:

"Mr. Pitcher, please curve it; let it come over the plate along about my waist on the inside corner of the plate. Then instruct your left fielder to play deep."

That's my favorite, but it is also my impression that the batter who is wise won't wait for his favorite. Because the moment the pitcher discovers what you like he feeds you the opposite. It's only by accident that you get what you like, and since all the pitchers know what I prefer I have no hesitancy in telling the public.

Don't Wait for Favorite Ball.

I never could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of a ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls which would be called "balls" by the umpire than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders.

Wagner gets lots of base hits on wild pitches. They tell me that Lajoie in the American League makes a practice of getting doubles and triples on balls that are as high as his head.

It certainly has been my experience that I could hit safely almost anything I could touch. There's a reason for this too. The position at the plate and the weight of the bat used has a lot to do with this.

They say that Wagner is awkward at the plate. His position may not be graceful, but it is one of the best in the league. If you will notice he usually lounges all over that plate. He is never set. The result is that he is ready to hit anything.

"All Set," But Can't Hit.

Contrast his position with that of any of the other fellows. They get up there, dig a hole for their right foot if they be right-handed hitters and get set. They are planted to take an awful wallop at the ball. But they are in no position to hit a fast breaking curve, for instance.

They are always taking the chance of being "beaned." That's true, for the reason that they are set, they are rigid, they can't get out of the way of a ball that breaks at the last moment and starts for their head.

Many a man has been hit by a pitched ball for the reason that he set himself to swing. The best way is to be up there lounging like Wagner. Then you are in position to step forward and meet the ball. You also are in position to swing at the fast breaking ones. You are running mighty little chance of being "beaned."

Speaking of the weaknesses of batters, it's my opinion that Wagner has the most peculiar "eye" of any man in the game. It's no use to try to fool him on a curve. You can't. It's just as useless to try a fast one. He'll pound that regardless of where it is pitched. He cares nothing for a shifter and a change of pace means nothing but a fattening of his batting average.

Jimmy Archer tells me that when the pitcher must pitch to Wagner, when he is in a pinch, he signals for one square over the heart of the plate, with nothing but speed on it. Archer says that Wagner will do less with this than he will if you try to fool him.

Since Wagner and Lajoie have been compared for years and years, perhaps it would not be wrong for me to say here that Archer says that the two men are alike in their weakness and that Lajoie can do less with the ball which most batters like than he can with the hooks, the slow ones, the fast ones with the hop. Archer knows, for the reason that he caught in the American League.

The size of the bat has a lot to do with it. I want one of medium size, say forty ounces. I'm strong enough to swing the kind that Chief Meyers does. But I couldn't get as many hits. The way the pitchers curve them on you nowadays a man must have something in his hand that he can swing at the last instant and swing hard and true.

I wouldn't like to say that the average batter swings a club that is too heavy. But in my opinion any time that a bat feels the least bit heavy it is too heavy and should be discarded for a lighter one.

Match Race at Revere Cycle Track

The special match sprint race between Frank Cavanaugh of Newark, better known as the "Irish champion," and Carlos Stephanie of Italy at the Revere cycle track tomorrow night is attracting great attention. Stephanie demonstrated his ability by easily defeating Pat Logan last week, and the Italian received a great hand from the backstretch crowd which has earned the name of the Latin quarter, owing to the large number of French and Italian fans who sit there regularly.

Cavanaugh and Stephanie will arrive tomorrow morning, and the big Irishman will devote considerable time during the afternoon to getting accustomed to the track, it being his first appearance in this vicinity.

CHAPPELLE REPORTS TO THE SOX

CHICAGO, July 18.—Larry Chappelle telegraphed Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, that he would report today ready to play. Comiskey has been perturbed by the unexplained absence of his high priced star.

He bought Chappelle to get a hard hitting outfielder for his club, and paid the Milwaukee Association team $13,500 and two players for him. Chappelle packed his grip and left Milwaukee, but since then Comiskey had heard nothing from him.

MAGNATES DENY TRADE INVOLVING SPEAKER AND COBB

This Has Nothing to Do with the Weather, but Isn't It Warm? — By "Bud" Fisher

COBB-SPEAKER TRADE A MYTH, MAGNATES SAY

DETROIT, July 18.—President Frank Navin of Detroit, President McAleer of Boston and Manager Hugh Jennings of the Tigers, all declared this afternoon that no overtures had been made by either the Red Sox or the Tigers for an exchange of Tris Speaker for Ty Cobb.

"It was a yarn made up in Boston," said Jennings. "We never heard of it here until the news came by a press dispatch from Boston. I have never even considered trading Cobb for Speaker."

"I haven't a single trade in mind just now, and you can bet I have never said a word in earnest or in jest about trading Speaker for Cobb or anybody else," said McAleer. "Of course, I would like to have Cobb and Walter Johnson and a lot of those fellows if I could get them. But I am equally set on keeping the good men I have got."

Detroit was very much interested in the Speaker-Cobb rumor today. Ty has lost much of his popularity in Detroit because of the tactics he adopted when he held out last Spring. He started late and has also been out of the game a considerable time because of injuries. This has decreased his value in the club. His temperamental nature has caused the Detroit management many worries.

Speaker would go welcomed in Detroit, as he is very popular here.

"Never heard of it," said Frank Navin over the long distance telephone from Adrian, Mich., when informed that Ty Cobb was to be traded for Speaker

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THE chances are that Charlie Smith, elongated and slow of movement, never saw his brother play ball before the double-header of yesterday. But today he doubtless has a very fair idea of the youngster's ability. He will know the kid the next time he sees him in uniform. Fred didn't do a thing to Brother Charlie. Oh no. Certainly not.

WE first became acquainted with Brother Charlie when he pitched for the Washington club. He was one of their best pitchers. He was a good pitcher on a poor ball club. In the course of time the Red Sox got him and he wore a Boston uniform for several months. Finally he was released to the Newark club, and from there he drifted around until Boston the Cubs got him and he has been with them ever since.

BROTHER FRED, who looks and gets as though he was considerably younger than Brother Charlie, learned to play ball on the Cleveland sand lots. He was learning when Brother Charlie was pitching in the big league. Brother Fred finally got a job with the Peoria or some such club, but nobody paid any attention to him. The scouts gave him the cold shoulder. He looked as though he would be lost in the baseball shuffle. But Bill Bradley, the former Cleveland third baseman now with Toledo, who lives in Cleveland, told Manager Stallings of the Boston Nationals last February that Brother Fred was some ball player and recommended that he be given a tryout on the Southern training trip.

"ALL right," wired Stallings, "send him along." So Brother Fred showed up at Athens last March when the Pilgrim squad gathered there for Spring practice. The eagle eye of Stallings picked him out before the squad had been in training half an hour.

"That kid is a ball player," he declared.

He is, so he says. Because Fred the better he liked him. And so one before the team left Athens he had decided to keep him right with the club all the season. Fred looked to be a big league baseball player when he showed up in Boston. He stuck around and showed everybody in morning practice that he was a fielder of the first water

THIRD base was being paced to the satisfaction of Stallings. Devlin began to go a bit slow so Stallings made up his mind to try McDonald there. McDonald had been pinch hitting in rare style and looked awfully good. I never saw McDonald played the big and was limited to hit well, but to strike Boston officers out trip. Then his hitting fell off to nothing. At last Stallings decided to give Brother Fred a chance at the bag. Brother Fred's chance came yesterday, and who should appear in the box for the Cubs but Brother Charlie?

BROTHER FRED didn't get a chance at Brother Charlie's curves until the third inning. Then he stepped to the plate and glared at his relative. Brother Charlie smiled a cold smile of superiority and began pitching to his kid brother. First thing Brother Charlie knew the ball was out in centre field and Brother Fred was on first base. George Tyler then came to bat and lunged. Brother Charlie picked up the ball and heaved it to second in an effort to trip Brother Fred. Too late. The Rabbit was land one down and Brother Charlie chucked it to third in an attempt to kill off Brother Fred on a force play. Too late again.

THESE vain efforts of Brother Charlie filled the bases with no one out. Otis Clymer then faced Brother Charlie and hit the soft drink sign in centre field, re-emptying the sacks. Connolly scored in centre, scoring Clymer. Brother Charlie finally got the side out, but was canned after that and Colonel L. Elwood Richie took up the burden. Colonel Ritchie did very well indeed, but was unable to undo the damage done by Brother Charlie and the home team took the first game 4 to 2.

IN the second spasm the locals did not fare so well. H. Squash Perdue was rapped in the first and fourth sessions and the Cubs won hands down. Humphries pitched tidy ball throughout, using a slow curve with tantalizing effect. In the fourth the Bostons made three singles in succession but couldn't score a run. In fact, when Manse got to first after his single he was the only one on base. Clymer started off with a single, but died stealing. Connolly falling to hit the ball after giving the hit and run sign. Connolly then hit a safe one, but he was out when a ball from the bat of Mann hit him on the base lines.

JOHNNIE C. EVERS and Bill Sweeney, the rival second base men, played great games of ball in the double-header. Both made hair-raising stops and throws. Evers was jeered a lot by the crowd, but he is used to it. You can't get his goat that way.

TOMORROW is "Baranville Day." Here's hoping the little fellow makes five hits, including a home run, two three-baggers, a double and a single, that he is not called out on strikes, that he steals a base and that he fields perfectly. That's some hoping, isn't it?

Fish vs. Meat Men in Game Tomorrow

Fish vs. Meat will be the attraction at Fenway Park tomorrow afternoon when the teams from T Wharf and Clinton Market clash in their annual game. This game is for the championship of the market district and today the betting was about even money.

The rosters of the two teams shows many former star ball players. Leon Clapp, Joe Stockwell, J. Coog J. Walker, Ralph Somerville, George Innis, Jim Waters, Georgie Fay and Ray Somerville will be the hopes of the Meat boys, Ray Somerville and Fay being the artillery men. T. Cunniff, T. Cosgrove, M. Kenney, J. Sullivan, E. Cosgrove, B. Call, J. Mahoney, P. P. Cobb, and L. Gilroy have been picked to win for the Fish boys.

Williams Wins Tennis Match with Canadian

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 18.—R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia today defeated R. F. Schengers of Canada in two straight sets of the final lawn tennis play between the United States and Canada for the selection of a team to challenge England for the Davis cup. The scores were 6—4 and 6—2.

Williams played a consistent game and won the third set by the score of 6—4

McCann Has Charge of New London Team

NEW LONDON, Ct., July 18.—H Eugene McCann of Bridgeport has been named manager of the New London Eastern Association baseball team. He will take charge today, displacing "Jack" Burns, who has been manager all the season.

DETROIT, Mich., July 18. After a welcomed day's rest, caused by a heavy rainstorm here—the first the Red Sox have encountered on this trip—activities will be resumed at Navin Field this afternoon, the Tigers and Bostons engaging in the second game of the series.

Ty Cobb has been reinstated by President Ban Johnson, who paid a short visit to this city yesterday, and will take his place in centre field for the Tigers in today's game, replacing Hughey Hitch. Hitch has filled in very creditably during Ty's suspension. Cobb was suspended for his run-in with Umpire Hildebrand during the Athletics series.

LITTLE LOST SISTER — By Virginia Brooks

A Story of the Author's Own Experiences in Chicago's Underworld

What Has Gone Before

The opening chapters of Virginia Brooks' striking story of the underworld, "Little Lost Sister," contain the author's explanation of methods employed by white slavers of the System to entrap young girls in cities and country towns everywhere.

Miss Brooks unfolds her adventures as a waitress in a downtown cafe, depicts herself as a clerk in the a department store and gives her experience with the girls employed at the "doll" counter. Then follows a pathetic recital of a little hungry girl's fight to earn an honest living.

One chapter is devoted to the "Cafe Sinister," which is a girl-trap, and another to the "Segregated Home." The Rexelwaum Ball is described, "Queer Fish in the Depths," "The Scarlet Wedding Dress," "Annie's Husband," "I Hunt a Job on the Stage," "Gray Wolf and Love Pirate," "Carmen of the Torpedo Cafe," and "The Trail of Watchful Johnny."

Today's installment asks, "Is the Levee Closed?"

Now Go On With the Story

Copyright, 1913, by American, Journal and S. F. and L. A. Examiners

CHAPTER XV.

Is the Levee Closed?

SOME friends of mine insisted in a conversation about uplift work in Chicago, that the levee had been shut tight by official order. I determined to find out just how the levee had obeyed the order

I had heard a great deal about Ike Blossom, captain of a pirate ship in the "district" known as "Freiheit's." This has always been declared one of the most notorious resorts in Chicago. I made up my mind to find out whether the place had been closed

One night with a detective friend of mine I paid a visit to Freiheit's dance hall and cafe. The detective was of my own sex She was attired like a lily of the field. I flatter myself that the plum-colored broadcloth with fake ermine facings that I wore on this expedition did much to secure me the entree.

My hat was a creation of fluffy black chiffon, with a huge chiffon bow poised upon it. To complete the illusion I used a good deal of rouge and powder. My lips were carmined and when I looked in the glass after the makeup was complete I could hardly recognize myself. Oh, yes—I had a patch of court plaster at the corner of my right eye. Somehow it seemed to intensify the effect.

Of course we had to be escorted. Two men friends volunteered for the service. When we entered the hall with its gleaming lights and artistic decorations I was surprised that an attractive a place could have achieved so evil a reputation.

Nothing to Suggest Evil

The tables for the serving of refreshment formed a circle 'round the room. There was nothing about this place to suggest evil. Perhaps well-meaning people had exaggerated the menace of Freiheit's. As far as I was able to determine the men and women in the place seemed respectable. That was a first impression.

I have attended some of the swaggerest dancing affairs ever held in Chicago and I must confess that in all my life I have never seen more really beautiful girls and women on a ballroom floor than were congregated at Freiheit's that night.

It is true, also, that while some of them were extravagantly gowned, the majority were dressed elegantly and in good taste. Many of the men were in evening dress. The spectacle was one werth going to see simply for its beauty.

The woman detective pinched my arm and pointed to a big man in a gray suit and soft hat, who stood at one end of the hall surveying the spectacle.

"That's Ike," she said. "He's looking over his flock."

The man seemed to be appraising everything—the size of the crowd, the activity of the waiters, the proportion of women to men—the chances of trade. He has an embracing eye.

We chose a table on the opposite side of the hall from that at which we had entered, being thus enabled to observe others who arrived and to visualize the constantly augmented throng.

Had to Order Drinks

We were barely seated before a waiter stood at our table ready to serve us drinks. The detective told me we must order something or they would be wanting us to move on. She ordered beer for two.

Just then the pianist struck up a catchy syncopated air and a pretty girl, one of the entertainers, danced out from between a row of palms, singing a popular song. She danced one of those pseudo-oriental things that call for all sorts of wriggling and contortion of the body. It was graceful in a certain way, but undeniably sensuous. The words of the song were as suggestive as the dance

"That sort of dancing ought not to be allowed in a public hall," I remarked to my companion.

"Why not?" she retorted. "If you find fault with that just wait until they get going—you'll see some dancing a little later on."

The orchestra struck up a lively two-step and fifty or more couples got up from the tables and began dancing. There was hardly an unskilled dancer among them. Nearly all the steps executed were intricate and most of them graceful, but it was scarcely a ballroom exhibition

There was something stagey about the dancing at this period of the evening's entertainment and later I found out why. Most of the men and women in those preliminary numbers were paid professionals Some of the women were as beautiful as they were graceful and the exhibition was undeniably attractive, despite its suggestiveness.

Soon the place filled up with real patrons—those who pay to dance and pay for the drinks they get and really support places like Freiheit's

There were old men with young girls and old girls with young men. There were women lacquered like Japanese pottery, their real features completely hidden by paint and powder.

Girls Not Over Fifteen

There were girls not over fifteen years old with men old enough to be their grandfathers. In most instances the girls were said to be habitues of the place. They danced all the most risque dances—the "bear" and the "bunny." I noticed that while the professional dancer is able to execute certain steps without being actually indecent, the novice only manages to achieve indecency when she endeavors to emulate them.

At least twenty of the young girls on that floor were, physically speaking, perfect specimens of American girlhood. I pointed them out to the woman detective

"They are the aristocracy of the profession," she said. These young women are in the heyday of their careers in the levee. They will look fresh and beautiful as they do now for perhaps six or eight months After the first Winter one can begin to pick out lines round their eyes and little perpendicular marks at the corners of their mouths. That is the beginning. About the second or third year they become coarsened to an astounding degree—physically as well as mentally Loose living and mental degradation show in their faces first. The lines of the face change. The features become exaggerated. A girl with a heavy chin line gets to look like a prize fighter. A girl with a small chin develops flesh under it so that what was merely a slight blemish becomes a striking fault and the girl a chinless wonder

A young woman who is inclined to heaviness will become gross and gelatinous within a few years. In five years she is hideous

Youthful Charm Is Lost

I found that women who have been living the life for eight years are remembered by habitues of the dance halls as beautiful young girls. They all look coarse and unattractive now. At least twenty such women were pointed out to me. They brazened the thing through. For, strange as it may seem, even the oldest of the faded women one encounters at Freiheit's still believes that she retains some degree of her original attractiveness—her ability to beguile men

One of the most attractive girls in the hall was referred to as Mazelle. If there is a more strikingly beautiful girl in Chicago I cannot imagine where she may be. This brilliant brunette has all the delicate shadings of coloring and expression that go to make real beauty. Her lithe young figure is the epitome of grace and her every gesture is indicative of gentle breeding

Now how in the world did Mazelle become a denizen of the Half-world? I determined to ask her.

This was more easily planned than accomplished, because of Mazelle's tremendous popularity. Men watched every move, anxious to engage her attention if opportunity presented

All Onlookers at First

At last I managed to be presented. My woman detective friend did it. She knew Mazelle and had tried to get her out of the district.

"Breaking into the fold?" inquired the dark-eyed Delilah, after I had been introduced.

"Just looking on," I said

"It's a dangerous diversion," she retorted. "All of us are onlookers at first. I was, too."

"Tell me about it," I begged.

"What magazine?" she laughed.

"None," I assured her—"I am just a humble investigator."

"Good gracious!" she said "Don't tell me you're Lilly Page Gaston?"

The exclamation was accompanied with a comical gesture of apprehension that made me laugh in spite of myself. Mazelle is an artiste.

"My idea is that a girl as brilliant as you are ought to find a field for her talents superior to this," I ventured.

"Dear me," she laughed, "that's rather hard on my philanthropic friend Blossom, isn't it?"

"Is he a philanthropist any of the time?" I queried

"Ikey?" she shrugged, "why, poor, dear Ike is the most maligned man in this sinful town. He's positively reeking with the spirit of philanthropy."

Just at that moment gray clad Blossom passed down the room Mazelle caught his eye and he bowed. She signalled him, laughing merrily at the joke of it all.

"Ikey, dear," she babbled, "tell me honestly and truly, now—aren't you a philanthropist?"

"Got your kiddin' clothes on again, Maze?" grinned the man in gray. "Why, I'd be as big a hit in a council of philanthropists as you'd be in a mothers' meeting. It's an even break"

The large Mr. Blossom passed on down the hall. His shoulders were shaking with laughter. He thought he had "put one over" on Mazie

Her One Great Sorrow

He had, too. When I looked at the girl again she was grave. It seemed to me that her lips were trembling. But when she caught my eye she laughed again

"You know he's right about that mothers' meeting," she remarked. "Between you and me, girlie, I've got one big sorrow about all this.'

"And that?" I whispered

"The baby of my own I always wanted and never can have," she laughed.

An instant later she was sailing down the polished floor with a man who had claimed her hand for the dance. They told me the man was crazy to marry her and she wouldn't have him because he made his money in whiskey.

Do you recall what I wrote about the contradictions of character to be found in the underworld? Well, consider Mazelle. She was ruined by her first drink of whiskey. She has never taken a drink of alcoholic liquor since she awoke to realization of her shame. She is a rara avis among the demi-monde.

"For my sins," said Mazelle, the last time I saw her, "I shall probably live a long time. At all events, there is one man I want to kill and some day I expect to meet him. That day I want to be very sober."

And talking about contradictions of character, Mazelle is the bond slave of a heavy-fisted rascal of a waiter named Monohan. If she doesn't gather much money he beats her.

Couples were constantly leaving the place by a certain exit I asked where they were going

"They go to the hotels hereabouts," said my friend—"that is part of the play. If these young girls could be kept in the hall until closing time and then sent home it wouldn't be so bad, but the dives called 'hotels' are just traps for them. It is the stronghold of the system"

Young girls were staggering about with flushed faces and bright eyes. They laughed unnaturally and danced with disgraceful abandon

My guide remarked that if I wanted to get a real light on the sort of talk carried on among young girls I would better step into the washroom for a moment. I did.

Never had I imagined that girls, under whatever provocation, could frame such awful phrases as fell casually from the lips of these children

As I was wiping my hands on a towel handed me with ceremony by a colored woman attendant a very young girl lurched toward me and poked a little sack of tobacco with a package of cigarette papers into my hand

"Roll me one," she hiccoughed; "I'm all to the blowy."

I can't roll a cigarette, but I thought I could After I had tried twice, intent on evading exposure of my amateur standing in the place, little fifteen year-old Tosca snatched the "makin's" away

"You're a —— of a rounder," she sneered. "Why, I can roll better'n that with my toes"

Five minutes later we were out of the place. I had seen enough

Is the levee closed? We found a dozen places running wide open in Wabash avenue, and women and girls from fourteen to sixty years old openly soliciting in the street.

"Why don't they really stop this?" I demanded. "Who are they afraid of?"

"Well," said the detective, cautiously, "he's a guy with an international reputation—the king of the district—but it wouldn't be wise for me to mention his name"

Three of Dame Fashion's Latest

THE dainty gown illustrated on the left-hand side of the picture is made of white linen with broad bands of embroidery; through this can be seen the pink silk of the foundation. The embroidered bands are carried out on the bodice, which has long sleeves; the parti-colored belt is novel. Black Chantilly lace drapes the evening gown in the centre, the long lines being very graceful. The gown is made of pink charmeuse, the drapery of the bodice being of pink tnon. The right-hand model shows a chic little glace coatee, high-waisted, with a full basque, and finished with a bow and long ends of velvet ribbon. A lace collar and cuffs make a pretty finish. Carried out in hydrangea blue, over a skirt of blue and white, this is a most effective costume.

Lupus Worst Form of Skin Diseases

Here is a Home Treatment that Overcomes even Worst Cases.

Lupus or any other Skin Disease will go Skulking Away if you use S. S. S.

A tiny pimple spreads to the side of the face and often covers the cheeks and bridge of the nose. It is very destructive to the tissues of the skin. No external treatments will overcome it, as the cause of lupus is from impurities in the blood supply. The only known method of cure is to get the blood supply under the control of S. S. S., the famous blood specific. Its action is quite remarkable and has direct influence upon the network of small blood vessels and glands in the skin.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it. For illustrated book on skin diseases write The Swift Specific Co., 183 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. Do not allow some zealous clerk to larrup the atmosphere in eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. Beware of substitutions.

The immense amount of work entailed upon the German censorship of films is almost incredible. According to the official returns, during June alone 1,340,000 yards of film (87½ miles) were examined by the censor; and in July 1,174,000 yards (68 miles). It is difficult to estimate the average cost of manufacturing a film, says the report, because the manufacturers grossly exaggerate the fees paid to the artists acting for the purpose of advertisement

The Girl and Her Mother

It Is Not the Girl Who Is Friendly with Her Mother Who Goes Wrong.

By DOROTHY DIX

THERE is no other human relationship that should be so close as that between mother and daughter. Every step that the girl must tread the mother has already trodden before her; every experience that the girl must undergo the mother has already known; every impulse that stirs the girl's heart the mother has already felt. And one would think that out of this very unanimity of sex, and blood, and knowledge, and experience there would grow a sympathy and affection that would be the strongest tie on earth.

This is far enought from being the case. There is no other girl alive with whom the average woman feels so unacquainted as with her own daughter, and there is no other woman in the entire universe to whom the girl could not easier open her heart than to her own mother.

No one will deny the truth of this assertion, or question that this estrangement between mothers and daughters offers a grave problem for the consideration of parents. For one thing, it robs the two men of the sweetest, the most unselfish, and the purest love they can ever know; and, for another, it destroys the girl of the protection and guidance that would prevent many a young creature from making a shipwreck of her life.

It is not the girl who is friends with her mother and who tells her what she thinks who goes wrong; it is the girl who goes to fortune tellers for advice, who confides her heart secrets to strangers, who meets on the streets men of whom her mother never heard and who finds every place more homelike than her own home, who furnishes the skeleton for so many family closets.

Many reasons may be given for this unfortunate state of affairs, the most obvious of which is that we put too much stress on what we call natural affection. We do not love people simply because they are kin to us; we love them because they are congenial to us and because they do something to make us love them. It is said that blood is thicker than water, but it is often also sourer than vinegar, and there are no other people that bear so set on edge as the uncongenial people of our own family, to whom we are bound by the ties of relationship.

SOME BETTER CLAIM

No girl ever yet whispered her shy little secrets to her mother because her mother had a right to know what she thought and felt; no girl was ever companionable with her mother because she owed her mother many hours for years of care and service. The woman who wants to be her daughter's best friend has to establish some better claim upon the girl's affection than that.

She has to make the girl feel that her love and sympathy are an unfailing fountain, to which she can always turn to refresh herself, and this not only in big things, but in little ones.

Few mothers have this comprehension of their daughters. They might as sympathize about a ruined dress, for clothes are a common level on which all women meet, but when it comes to the little things in which the mother has no personal interest, the girl who expects sympathy of her mother generally asks for bread and is given a stone. In the majority of cases to mother's sympathy narrows down to purely personal tastes, and when you hear a woman lamenting that her Mary is "queer" or her Sally such a "disappointment," ninety-nine times out of a hundred it is merely a case of Mary or Sally wanting to do something that her mother never wanted to do.

CRITIC ON THE HEARTH

Another bar between mothers and daughters is that the mother so often allows herself to be nothing but the critic on the hearth, and keeps herself in a sternly disapproving attitude that frightens away every confidence as completely as a scarecrow does timid birds. If there ever was a time when she was giddy and giggling she has forgotten it. If there ever was a time when she thought it a triumph to adorn herself in seventeen secret fraternity pins and wear college colors, and considered it madly entertaining to have callow youths write their names on her fan, she ignores it.

Now the girl is miserably conscious that she and her friends fall far below that exalted standard. She knows her mother despises them accordingly, and she protects herself as best she can by silence, and by keeping her chums, male and female, out of her mother's sight.

It's no wonder that the girl who knows that her mother is going to ridicule her friends meets them elsewhere than in her own home. It's the mother with the chronic "don't" habit who drives her daughters into actual wrong-doing.

Another potent cause of friction between mothers and daughters is in the inability of mothers to realize that their daughters are grown and have the rights of grown people. There is, apparently, no other thing so impossible for parents to see that their adult children resent being treated like babies. Sometimes a father rises to the height of granting his son liberty to do as he pleases, but as long as a girl remains at home her mother considers she has a perfect right to dictate to her about her clothes, what she shall eat, and think, and believe, how she shall breathe.

There is nothing new to these suggestions. Almost every mother's daughter of us has had a good mother, who would have died for us—and who rubbed us continually the wrong way. We remember how she worked for us, and sacrificed for us, and the wonder of it all is that, having been through it all, and knowing just how a girl felt, we should be passing the same kind of blundering affection on to our own daughters.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I DO NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and in love with a man two years my senior. He is nice and has a good position. I kept steady company with him for a year and a half. Then my mother stopped him from calling on me, but never gave a reason; but, as it is, we go out, when we get a chance, together. He has given me two diamond rings. Do you think it is right for me to see him as long as mother does not consent?

CUTIE.

YOU owe her obedience, and must not see this man clandestinely. On the other hand, you are now eighteen, and your mother owes you a reason for her objections. Can you not persuade her to tell you what they are that in that way you have a chance to overcome them? If he is the man who is to tell you the "sweetest story of all," I don't want you to lose him.

NOT A DAY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and am keeping company with a man twenty-five years old. Do you think he is too old for me? We never quarrel. He loves me. I know, but my father thinks him too old for me. He makes fine pay and gives me good times. We think a lot about each other and get along fine.

H. E.

HE is not a day too old. Are you sure your father's objections are not based on some other ground?

BETTER NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I received an invitation from a young lady to attend her birthday party. Is it proper for me to accept the invitation, as I have never been introduced or even seen the young miss.

PERPLEXED.

A GIRL who would do anything so foolish deserves the rebuke you are in position to give her by declining the invitation.

By Virtue of Age

"Yes," said the old man to his visitor, "I'm proud of my daughters, and it is the ambition of my heart to see them all comfortably married.

"What's more," he added, knowingly, "I've made a bit of money in my time, so my girls won't go to their husbands penniless. There's Mary, for example, twenty-five years old, and a real good lass—I'll give her $1,500 on her wedding day. And to Bet—poor sec, she had passed her thirty-fifth Summer—I'll give her, at any rate, a couple of thousand; whilst the man who takes Eliza can rely on taking her with at least $5,000 of the very best."

"By the way," inquired the young man, "how old is Eliza?"

"Forty," replied the elder.

"Hum! I suppose you don't happen to have a daughter somewhere between sixty and seventy?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

They Told Jennie the Boss Wanted to See Her

CHAPTER 18

THINGS went along quietly with Jennie for three or four weeks. She had paid the $1.50 weekly instalment on her clothes regularly, but she noticed everything was not quite right at the office. Her former girl friend would not speak to her, and Jennie often noticed her whispering to the other girls, and then they would all look at Jennie.

Jennie knew they were talking about her, but she could not find out what it was they said.

Usually, in the office during the dull season, they laid several of the girls off or let them go entirely, but they always kept the best ones—the ones that always did just a little MORE than the boss asked them to do.

Jennie had always been among these, for she worked hard and kept her mind on her work—that is, she used to before she got the foolish ideas about clothes and wanting to do like otherwise girls she saw.

Of late Jennie had been thinking more of the good times she had, and wanted to have, than she had of her work, and had made several mistakes in her work, for which she was "called down" by the boss.

She felt and knew that the other girl was doing all she could to make Jennie lose her job, and what then of the $1.50 weekly instalment on her clothes, and also the remainder of her $8.00 a week that was so badly needed at home.

Jennie had not seen the fellow since Tom met them at the door going into the hotel and had realized what a narrow escape she had when Tom told her what an awful place it was. One of the girls told Jennie that the boss wanted to see her, and with a dryness in her throat and fluttering heart she went slowly toward the private office of the boss.

The Mending Man's Sweethearts

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE vegetable woman pulled up her raggedy old horse in a hurry.

"Whoa," she cried stentoriously, "Whoa, there, don't ya never want me to speak to nobody that ain't a-buyin' from me?"

The man who came to mend the hoe and fix the garden hose and see what was the matter with the back gate looked up.

"Why, hello, Mary," he said, and he laid down his tools and went out to the vegetable woman's wagon to have a little friendly chat.

"How's Laurelia?" said the vegetable woman.

"Fine," said the man who mends things. "We're all goin' fishin' some fine day."

"Fishin,'" said the vegetable woman, "how on earth are you goin' to get Laurelia fishin'?"

"Goin to take her in my wagon," said the man who fixes things. "I've rigged up a kind of a swing seat that is just as easy as a cradle and I'm goin' to set up the umbrella over that and there she'll be as nice as you please.

"She can sit there on the bank and see us fish—she's pretty tickled over it."

Just then something called me away from the window and I didn't hear the rest, but the vegetable woman told me—I almost asked her—there was something so particular in the way she asked after Laurelia that I really wanted to know all about it.

"It's this way," said the vegetable woman. "All the neighbors know the whole story, so I guess it's no harm telling you, too.

"Laurelia was kind of a pretty girl, blue-eyed and yellow-haired, and kind of trustful and easy goin'. She went to town to work in a milliner's store and she got into some kind of trouble some way and came home carryin' the prettiest little baby of a girl you ever see.

"Her folks wouldn't have her around and it looked kind of hard for Laurelia for a while, but one day this mendin' man met her and her baby and first we knew they was married and he put up the neatest little house for her you ever did see.

"They've got two boys now of their own, but the mendin' man thinks all the world of the girl, too.

"I asked him one day 'how's your sweetheart,'" and he says, 'I've two, you know,' and he meant the little girl, too.

"Well, Laurelia's all crippled up with rheumatism; been so for four or five years; can't walk a step. He got her a wheel chair, tho', and whenever the circus comes to town there they both are big as life, and if anybody has more peanuts or lemonade than Laurelia I don't know who it is.

"I saw her the other day riding around with him in his mendin' cart. He'd rigged up a seat in back for her and bolsted her into it someway, and she had on a new pink hat with roses on it, same as a girl's.

"I spoke to him about it just now and he laughed just like a boy and said, 'Yep, ain't it purty? She's got three nice hats, but I like that one best, so she always wears that when I take her out a-ridin'.'

"Her three sisters is all married now—married well, too, for as money goes. One of 'em lives up in the city and has a house bigger than the hotel, they say; but I saw her once to a store up there a-shoppin' and she looked kind of long-faced and peaked. They ain't no children, and they say he hoards it against her.

"The other's husband drinks, for all he's so well off—and the third one's man ran away with some circus girl or actress or other and now she's home herself. They say Laurelia offered her a home, but it wasn't good enough for her.

"I never did see a husband like Laurelia's. He never seems to think of a thing outside his work but how to please her. I never like to let him go by without speakin' and askin' after Laurelia. I kind o' like to see him smile when he speaks her name."

The vegetable woman has a story herself, they say; I heard that afterwards. She knew the man who mends things when she was young and her skin wasn't so tanned from working in her garden as it is now. But she was delicate and couldn't ever marry, the doctors said, so she just planted flowers and vegetables and had her little house and took care of her mother—and now she stops and asks after Laurelia and is happy to see how Laurelia's husband cherishes her and loves her.

What a queer, little, narrow life they lead, the vegetable women and Laurelia, and the man who mends things, and their kind! No theatres, no opera, no books, not much music, never heard of a good picture, never ate a really good dinner in their lives, couldn't do a one-step or a bunny hug to save their lives, wouldn't know a cabaret if they met it in Broadway.

And yet, somehow, there was something about the smile in the eyes of the man who mends things that made me feel as if used to when I read about brave knights who went forth to slay dragons and came back on horseback to a fanfare of trumpets.

I wish somebody would find the man who mends things and pin some kind of a decoration on his coat; but, I suppose, he'd take it off and make Laurelia put it on a new hat for herself, and then smile all the more sweetly—some men are so old, aren't they?

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THIS is vacashun time & I told Pa that I had a chanst to make sum munny so I wuddent have to ask him for any spending munny all Summer. I had a nice little offer to be a boy actor with a moving picter company & I thought sure Pa wod let me go, but he sed: No, my son, I want you to be a lawyer or a doctor wen you grow up, I do not want you to git any idee of ever going on the stage.

But there is a chanst for me to make 20$ a week, I told him. All I have to do is to act like a regular boy. That is a lot of munny to pass up, I told Pa.

You will find that most if it is kinge munny, Pa sed. I have herd a lot in my time about actors getting swell salaries, but it always turns out that the actors I know only git part of what they say they git & only git that part a part of the time.

KIND OF MAD

I was kind of mad at Pa to think that he wuddent give me such a fine chanst, but I dident say any more, because he knows best, I supposa. Pa sed that he never took any stock in peepul that made there living pretending they was sumething that they wasent. Take them fortune tellers & Clairevoy-ants, for instans, sed Pa, they have ads in the paper that tell what wonders they are & how they can tell the past from the present & read the future & all that. They make me tired, sed Pa. I dount want my son to be anything except sum good, reeliable lawyer or doctor.

It was kind of funny that Pa spoak about clairevoy-ants, because I saw a ad. that sam afternoon & it sed Boy Wanted. I went in & it was a clairevoyant offis that wanted the boy. He sed he wud give me $8 a week to ware a Orien-tal custom & stand neer him wen he was telling peepul about the future. I had to ware a mask, too, & it was offul hot, but I dident kick beekuss $8 was quite a lot of munny even if I coddent git the 20$ job. So I went to work.

This afternoon I was standing near the tabel ware the clairevoyant was sitting the boy munny, & who came in exsep Pa. He kind of snerked in, & he looked all around him. I was scared at first, beekuss I thot maybe he was looking for me, but he was there to have his fortune told & beesides I had on my mask. That is my Pa, I whispered to the man who hired me, he has been married fifteen years, to a woman with dark hair and blue eyes. He thinks he will be President sum day. Tell him sumthing awful about his future if he dount let his son be a moving picter actor. So the man did. This is what he told Pa:

My eyes have been closed for twenty centuries, tho you think it but a instant. I see you beefore me as you stood on yure marriage day, with a butiful woman with dark hair & blue eyes. That was fifteen years ago. Three years passed happily. A White House looms before me. She is to grace it some day, this wondrous woman with the dark hair and blue eyes, & you, her husband, are to be President.

TEN DOLLARS MORE

Wunderful, sed Pa, here is ten moar dollars.

You have a son with rare talent, and the man to Pa. He will be the greatest moving picter actor that lived. It will be his munny that finances your campaign & maike you President. Good-day, am very tired now. So Pa went out.

Bobbie, sed Pa to me wen I came hoam tonite, I have that it all over, & you can be a moving picter actor if you want to.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks grew stronger this morning, prices being up at the start here and a number of leading issues making gains in New York. In this city the rise in New Haven was the early feature. It opened 1¼ higher, soon increased this gain to 2¼, and at the end of the first hour had receded some, but was still 2 points above last night's closing figure. Boston & Maine was unchanged.

United Fruit rose a point and a number of mining stocks advanced fractionally.

The New York market was strong at the end of the first hour and a number of stocks showed substantial gains, rising those to advance the most were Indian Pacific 1%, Southern Pacific 1%, Union Pacific 1%, Reading 1¼, Steel 1, Amalgamated 1, and American Beet 1%.

Now Haven a New York Leader.

Announcement of the resignation of President Mellen as head of the New Haven system apparently strengthened the stock of that road. When the New York market opened New Haven rose 1%, and was the gain for Canadian Pacific. The list was somewhat irregular at first. The bears applied pressure to the Mexican situation and uncertainty as to the outcome of the Balkan war. It is reported from abroad that sentiment is more cheerful today in Paris regard to the latter. There was more feeling in Berlin.

Early advances in New York were weakened 5, American Can 3%, Pacific 5, Southern Pacific 5, Reading, Pennsylvania 5, and American Beet 5. Those to decline included Central 5, Lehigh Valley 5, and Great Northern pref. 5.

Steel was strong, opening at 54 bid, up ¼. Half an hour after the list was strong and an active number of buying orders executed. Later there was soft taking.

Consolidated and Mexican Petroleum weak. California Petroleum declined a loss of 3% on reports that refunds would be interrupted. Mexican lost 2½ on account of uncertainty surrounding conditions in Mexico.

The Curb was steady. Americans in London were steady and above New York parity. Canadian Pacific was re-purchased there.

To Part Bankers and Brokers.

Democratic members of the House Banking and Currency Committee dropped a section out of the currency bill as a result of statements made to the Pujo probers a year ago as to how New York bankers had helped brokers in speculative operations. The eliminated section rendered it possible for district banks to obtain from reserve banks loans on securities which figure in stock operations. A Washington dispatch states in regard to this:

"To strengthen the government in its determination to divorce national bank officials and examiners from the influence of brokers, penalties for the giving and receiving of gratuities were increased to $5,000 fine and five years in the penitentiary for each such offence.

"During the Pujo investigation it developed that officers of some national banks in New York shared in pooling operations in connection with manipulation of the California Petroleum Company stock, although it was admitted that the practice was secret. Their profits were held by the committee to have been in the nature of a gratuity."

Balkan Situation a Great Factor.

Hope in Europe is reported as further deferred regarding a settlement of the fracas in the Balkans. After Turkey quit fighting, it was stated from day to day that peace would be restored in Southeastern Europe, and that as soon as arrangements had been made to pay the obligations gold would come out of hiding and that monetary stringency be relieved. This has not happened and bankers the world over say the Balkan situation is the vise which is holding money tight. Gaida Aubert of Paris, financial correspondent for Hearst newspapers, reports that Balkan governments have lost control of the situation and that military cliques have the upper hand.

"No one can tell how it will end," he says, "and although the Powers are unwilling to see Bulgaria crushed out of existence, she is going to play the pot dilemma." The market's attitude early in the week shows plainly that the Balkan imbroglio is the key to the situation regarding the market's future. The public is eager before starting for the holidays to reinvest enormous amounts of money hoarded away in the last ten months. Prices are attractive enough at the present level, but the Balkan problem must be got of the way first, then the rush will begin.

"Our leading banks are rather pessimistic, this protracted war having upset their calculations. I reckon they hold more of the $80,000,000 treasury notes of all the belligerents, which, as soon as possible, will be reimbursed by time loans loaned to the public.

"These advances have made the war possible, and on the other hand the war has set the public against the belligerents; therefore the loans when issued will get a poor welcome. After such exhibitions of barbarity, treachery and folly who will trust any of them? The banks may in the end therefore be stuck with a large proportion of these loans."

I. C. C. Reports on Roads for 1912.

There are some interesting statistics in the Interstate Commerce Commission's report on the railroads of the country for the fiscal year ending with June last year. For that 1912 fiscal period the operating revenue of the roads totalled $2,826,917,987 against $2,772,733,828 in the previous year. Operating expenses were $1,958,963,431, against $1,901,399,475. While net operating revenue was $867,954,556. The report covers 240,226 miles of line operated. The total mileage of tracks was 360,714, an increase of 8,925 miles.

Employes numbered 1,699,218, an increase of 45,987. There were 63,556 engineers, 66,408 firemen, 49,631 conductors, 135,939 other trainmen and 39,330 switch tenders, crossing tenders and watchmen. Wages and salaries reached $1,249,115,172.

Par value of the amount of railway capital outstanding was $19,533,750,802.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market was stronger at the opening, spot being up 7s 6d and futures 6s 3d.

It is estimated that since the present buying movement began sales of electrolytic amount to about 50,000,000 pounds. Almost all of the metal has been sold to European consumers. The price agreed to is 13 cents a pound for delivering began on any scale. It is said that the latest sales have been at from 14½ to 14¾. Producers are not awaiting a rush from American consumers.

It was cabled to the News Bureau from London this morning, "Demand is now quieter, with small dealers doing business at slight concessions from prices of large agencies, which are all quoting 14⅝ cents. Practically all inquiries are for immediate delivery."

Financial News in Brief.

A sent on the New York Stock Exchange has sold at $37,000, the lowest price on record.

Directors of the Yulcan Detinning Company have passed the preferred dividend.

American Express Company directors have voted to distribute to stockholders on a pro rata basis 400,000 shares of Wells Fargo & Company stock which the former corporation has owned since 1918.

It is denied that the St. Louis, Rocky Mountain & Pacific Railroad has been bought by the Atchison.

HOWARD ELLIOTT, president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, mentioned as a possible successor to President Mellen of the New Haven.

ELLIOTT MAY BE SUCCESSOR TO MELLEN

Howard Elliott, the railroad expert, who is most prominently named as likely to succeed President Mellen, is known among his friends as "a hog for hard work." He is president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, in which office he succeeded Mr. Mellen when the latter quit the Northern Pacific to go with the New Haven. Having succeeded Mr. Mellen once, President Elliott's friends say it is more than mere coincidence that he is mentioned for a possible second succession to Mr. Mellen.

Here is a sketch of President Elliott:

Born in New York city, fifty-three years ago.

Moved to Cambridge when he was a boy.

Graduated in 1879 from the Cambridge High School.

Graduated in 1881 from Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University. Became clerk the same year for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

In 1887 was made general freight and passenger agent.

January, 1898, made general manager of Missouri lines of the Burlington road.

In 1900 made general manager of the main section of Burlington lines.

May, 1901, elected second vice-president of the Burlington road.

In 1903 elected president of the Northern Pacific road.

Member Board of Overseers of Harvard.

Very popular in West, was leader in Louisiana Purchase Exposition and was president of the National Apple Show for two years.

It is said of him that he "talks more in a week than President Mellen does in a month." In a new type to New England—a striking contrast to President Mellen as a railroad expert. Said to have all the financial ability attributed to Mellen in addition to the constructive railroading genius that has ruled the Northern Pacific for ten years.

FOSS STRIKERS TO GET REPORT OF MEDIATOR

The striking employes of the Foss plants at Hyde Park will meet tomorrow afternoon to receive the report of Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of labor, that his efforts at mediation have so far been without result.

Mr. Post, after his conference with Governor Foss, met James O'Connell, Harold Stanley, chairman of the Strike Committee at Hyde Park; O. L. Preble, international officer of the Pattern-makers' Union, and Roscoe L. Hall, international vice-president of the Machinists' Union.

In a statement the strikers' committee says in part:

"As far as we can see, the offer of Governor Foss is nothing more or less than an unconditional surrender of the strikers. What they think of it will be left for them to decide.

"No comment will be made to the strikers when the report is presented."

Business to Rule World, Says Filene

Boston Merchant Tells the Need of Organization.

Edward A. Filene of Boston, in a remarkable address to the American Chamber of Commerce at Paris, France, opened a new field for work by Chambers of Commerce when he made a strong plea for further organization of business men.

He said: "Business men will, in the coming era, rule the world," and he explained:

"I base my belief on the fact that under the new conditions the leadership of political and social power must go to those accustomed and trained by their daily work to take the initiative.

"So we must organize for our leadership, for, in the masses of employes will be a helpless mob without organization and leadership, so we, the business men of the world will be a helpless mob without organization; and this organization must be thorough and inclusive, must be little and big, must be local and national and international.

Many Hurt in Ohio Train Collision

CLEVELAND, July 18.—Eight persons were injured and taken to a hospital here and others were less seriously hurt in a rear-end collision between two passenger trains on the main line of the Lake Shore Railway at Perry, O., today.

SHOT TO SCARE BOY, DECLARES QUINCY OFFICE

A second hearing on the shooting of Frank Gilraine by Officer John Avery of Quincy, on the night of June 2 near the Quincy High School Hall, will be held in the office of Mayor Sinnott next week from next Wednesday.

Following the testimony of Officer Avery, several witnesses for him, as well as John J. Gilraine, who appeared for his brother, the case was closed, and no argument was taken without action.

Officer Avery testified that he was on duty at the High School at the time of the shooting. He was told that there were two men outside the hall who were killing each other. He hurried out, and found one of them running away. He says he ordered him to stop, but he kept on and did so, hitting Gilraine, who dropped to the ground, saying that his leg was broken.

Car and Wagon in Crash; Man Is Hurt

One man was hurt and a horse was so badly injured that it had to be shot, in a collision between a wagon and a street car on Federal street today. George Kahler was driving a wagon up Federal street and turned out to pass a coal wagon. A car came from behind and struck the horse. The horse was knocked over, the wagon was smashed and a piece of debris struck George Toppan, who was on the sidewalk, and cut his face.

Stefannson Adds Third Ship to Fleet

NOME, Alaska, July 18.—Vilhjalmur Stefannson has obtained consent of the Canadian Government, which is financing his polar exploration trip, to add to his fleet a gasoline schooner to act as auxiliary to the exploring ships Karluk and Alaska. Everything is in readiness for the trip, but Stefannson has announced he will not start until the third vessel has been selected.

Eagle Steals Pig, in West Warren

WEST WARREN, July 18.—An eagle stole one of Joseph Bircenski's young pigs yesterday. The piglet's squeals made the eagle's presence known, and a "bald buzzard" till the bird dropped into the thick woods. Then the squeals ended, and Bircenski is mourning his pig.

Army Aviator Is Killed by Fall

PARIS, July 18.—Lieutenant Chaigneau of the aerial corps of the French army was killed at Chalons today when his monoplane tumbled 400 feet in the air. He was the 298th victim of aviation.

Herbert R. Sayles Dead.

UXBRIDGE, July 18.—Herbert R. Sayles, who since the death of his father has been treasurer of the Richard Sayles Woolen Company, died here yesterday.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT IN THE MARKET TODAY

Codfish is the one staple fish that is very scarce at present. Yesterday it sold at wholesale for eleven and one-half cents a pound, and although the retailers have not advanced the price in proportion, hoping the supply will increase soon, they state that the price will have to advance sharply if the shortage continues.

Lovers of swordfish will be able to buy it all Winter, judging from the amount that is going into the fish freezers at present. This has a tendency to keep the price up at present and swordfish retails today for about eighteen cents a pound.

The receipts of fruit at Boston for the past fortnight have been enormous. During the past four days alone the figures show that 124,325 stems of bananas, 5,000 crates of Italian oranges, 20,000 crates of Italian lemons, 20,000 baskets of Georgia peaches, 100 carloads of cantaloupe, thirty-eight carloads of watermelons and large quantities of other fruits have been received by Boston commission men.

New apples are coming into the market in small quantities, something over 1000 baskets having arrived from the South this week.

California pears are coming in greater quantities and sell now for thirty and forty cents a dozen. Green figs are also in the market, but they sell for very high prices, ranging from $1 to $1.25 per dozen.

Nova Scotia is the present source of supply of strawberries for Boston. They sell for twenty to twenty-five cents a box.

Green limes, as large as ordinary lemons, are offered for sale in Boston for twenty-five cents a dozen.

Zionists Plan Memorial Meeting.

Over a thousand delegates of the Junior Zionist Council of Massachusetts and Junior Zionist clubs of the State will attend a memorial meeting to Dr. Herzl, founder of Zionism, on Sunday, at Ohel Jacob Synagogue, East Boston.

President Mellen's Resignation Only a First Victory for Public Opinion

With the resignation of President Charles S. Mellen, of the New Haven, there comes crashing to earth the Divine Right of Railroad Kings. The public serves notice on all railway promoters, directors and managers that it has the power to reach them and to punish. That explosive policy, "The public be dammed," is henceforth to be labeled, "Dangerous—Handle with Care."

The AMERICAN rejoices not in the humiliation of a man, but in the downfall of an ATTITUDE. It rejoices that it has been the relentless and persistent spokesman of public exasperation aroused by murderous incompetence, reckless defiance of law and the public interest, and callous robbery of stockholders.

The AMERICAN rejoices that it has been able to prove to the public the high-handed methods of this bribing and plundering monopoly to such an extent that its affrighted managers feel it necessary to find a scapegoat, to do at least something in an attempt to appease public anger.

A mere change of figure-heads will not be sufficient. At any time the powerful directors of the New Haven could have dispensed with the services of Mr. Mellen had they disapproved the policy of monopoly-building and criminal-railroad neglect that has been associated with his name. Watering of stock, bribing of legislatures, throttling of competition, with flights in "high finance"—all this accompanied by disastrous wreck after wreck, murdering and maiming due to sheer neglect and diversion of maintenance and equipment funds—have got to stop.

New England cannot be made a sleek prize for railroad pirates, however imposing their names and their fortunes. These men are not above the law. Even now they have realized that a grim resolve to take out of their hands the public interests they have no grievously outraged has taken deep root. As Mr. Hearst has repeatedly pointed out both in the Boston AMERICAN and the New York American:

"It is within the immediate power of the State of Massachusetts to take over the Boston & Maine Railroad and conduct that corporation under State ownership."

The resignation of Mr. Mellen is important; the victory of public opinion and of Mr. Hearst's newspapers is important; but of far greater importance are the moral health and business interests of the Commonwealths of New England.

As for President Mellen, the man—perhaps if he had served the public with as much zeal as he has served J. P. Morgan & Co. and William Rockefeller, they would not have deserted him after the three-score mile-post of life.

Mr. Mellen is an able man and, as repeatedly declared, he is not personally responsible for the miserable railroad situation in New England. In fact, it appeared at the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission that he had personally opposed some of the worst features of the railroad monopoly. Perhaps, if he had been let alone, the public might have had the advantage of his undoubted experience and ability as a railroad man.

Because he is not personally responsible for the conditions against which the New England public have arisen, it will be folly for the present directors of the New Haven Railroad to attempt to satisfy public indignation by SACRIFICING Mr. Mellen. THEY themselves MUST GO. And the railroad must GIVE BACK to independent enterprise the trolleys and steamships which they have taken, and GIVE UP to the public and to the State of Massachusetts the STOCK in the Boston & Maine which it now controls through the Boston Holding Company.

No More Indecision, Inaction and Little-Americanism About Mexico!

Time will not stand still in Mexico while the Secretary of State for the United States is counting the box-office receipts for Chautauqua lectures.

The whole situation in Mexico has refused to be "shelved" until a profitable Summer holiday has passed.

Several important and powerful governments have decided that the burning up of their vast interests in Mexico has gone on long enough; that the bonfire must be put out; that they have patiently waited for the United States, while the slaughter and destruction were proceeding, to take steps toward pacifying its neighbor country; and that patience has a sharp limit.

The United States, standing firmly by the Monroe Doctrine, has imposed upon itself just such a task as this. But the present Secretary of State's Americanism has not been big enough to embrace Mexico. He has been too busy theorizing and dreaming and preparing sonorous phrases for the lecture platform to realize that next door was a hideous condition of reality with which it was his immediate duty to grapple.

Therefore this nation has been sharply called to task by several great powers for its inaction, and its dignity, which ought to be more precious to the Secretary of State than all his boasted savings, earnings and holidays, has not been thereby increased.

This should not have occurred. Had the Secretary of State taken up the Mexican problem weeks ago it would not have occurred. It is his duty to prevent the occurrence of just such unpleasant and unnecessary situations. As the representative of his country's interests, he has herein failed.

So-called rebels in Mexico have been blowing up railroad trains, paralyzing traffic in more than half that great country, ruining, insulting and even killing Americans, and this has been going on for many months.

The United States government has apparently been unable to make up its mind about the steps it should take to bring about peace in Mexico. So it has done nothing. It has not even joined with the other great powers in recognition of the only government that does exist there, however beset that may be.

Now it must decide, and decide quickly, even if the Secretary of State's lecture dates conflict with a requirement of his presence at Washington. If it does not decide, it will be faced with a very much more serious and humiliating situation, for Great Powers have decided that the bonfire must be put out.

The "Little American" in these days of great changes and great ferment and great progress WILL NOT DO. That must almost be dawning on the brain even of the Secretary of State. Of all weaknesses, indecision is the most fatal. Ignoring a dangerous and exasperating situation in Mexico or elsewhere is only to court a kick from a stranger's spur.

Let Mr. Bryan get busy with the pressing business of his country. There is more dignity and honor in availing himself of his noble privilege to do so than in all the handkerchief waving at all the Chautauquas that ever were or ever will be held.

A Good Appointment By Governor Foss

The AMERICAN commends the Governor's appointment of Mr. James P. Magenis to be a member of the Boston Finance Commission.

The appointment of Mr. Magenis has accomplished several very desirable objects.

FIRST. It has placed in this important office an able, intelligent and conscientious man.

SECOND. It places in the office a man who will neither be a partisan of Mayor Fitzgerald's nor yet join in any partisan attack upon him, and whose judicial character will tend to correct the present tendency of the Finance Commission to snarl and snap at the heels of the Mayor for the mere pleasure of being disagreeable.

THIRD. It is a recognition of the Progressive Party which is coming so fast in this Commonwealth that the attempt to ignore it is absurd.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE L STREET BATH

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Rowdyism at the L Street Bath should be stamped out. A word from the attendants will do it; if not, then the strong arm of the law should step in.

There should be more places such as the L street, thereby relieving the congestion that during the hot spell chokes the L street with more people than can be handled.

Enlarge the L street. It can be done. This bath is a great physical need, and the more we have the better it is for health and happiness. To those who complain because of a lack of towels, I wish to say that towels are not as important as the air, water and sun. Bring a towel with you, and trunks, too, and even with out we are dry by nature's will, the air and sun. We are never satisfied unless we have all and everything that goes with it, that seems to be the way and mood of many.

Let us appreciate in full the value of the L street Bath. We don't want State control over it, as at the Revere Beach, where a fee of twenty-five cents is charged.

The L street is the poor man's haven of health and happiness, and as such it should continue.

Would it not be well for attendants to assist some of those who are trying to swim, to learn. The art of swimming is quite necessary and we never know when it may come to our need.

As for those non-residents of Boston, who take to the L as they take to the water, what are we to do with them? The process of elimination seems somewhat difficult. They know a good thing.

MAX HENRY NEWMAN.

Every Man's a Boss---Somewhere

Shautauqua

By PERCY SHAW

ACROSS the nation flashed the news,
"He's coming with his shop worn views,
With speeches tucked in vest and shoes,"
$chautauqua.

A hundred thousand groans are heard,
A hundred thousand hearts are stirred,
With anguish for that honored word,
$chautauqua.

He will not pause, his smile is set,
What if his weary hearers fret!
Such trifles never stopped him yet,
$chautauqua.

For man must live and why not he?
The circuit is so fat and free
And Uncle Sam so niggardly,
$chautauqua.

Let others tend affairs of State,
Let others scheme and arbitrate,
His hobby is to prate and prate,
$chautauqua.

So much per word, so much per hour,
So much per metaphoric shower,
So much per hyperbolic flower,
$chautauqua.

Letters from American Readers

GOVERNMENT AND RAILWAYS

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

What, but precedent, is in the way of the government at Washington assuming charge of and operating railways when they cease properly to perform their public functions under private operation, for instance, in case of a big strike? The Mayor of Cincinnati took charge of, and operated the ice plants of his city when the public welfare was endangered, and the Ice Trust was quick to grant a hearing to its employes. Similar action by the government would be followed by a like course by the railway officials in the present threatened calamity. No well-regulated railroad would wish to be exposed to the publicity that such action by the government would entail, especially in the matter of receipts and expenditures.

CHAS. LEIDY.

A BULGARIAN POINT OF VIEW

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Let the American people be assured that Bulgaria is in the struggle today only to carry her motions: "I want no other nation's right or land, but neither do I give any of mine"; "I want to unite all my long oppressed and torn-to-pieces people in one body and one soul, which is my God given right." If Bulgaria entered into the present war, with her already exhausted means and greatly fatigued army, it was because she was driven into it by an equally exhausted patience toward her bogus allies.

The Greek stories of Bulgarian atrocities are not to be relied upon. Bulgarians are not atrocious people. Of course, the cup of bitterness has long been overflowing for native Macedonians, and I should not be surprised if some sagies irregulars have committed some desperate acts.

Culture—Women, No Matter How Highly Accomplished They May Be, Lack Real Culture if They Allow Evil Temper, Evil Speaking, Selfishness and Uncharitableness to Grow Into Their Nature.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may know much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

We speak of a piece of land being under high cultivation.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled, and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

Mere Education Can Never Make a Cultivated Person

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultivated person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfilment of that rule's obligations; but one who comprehends its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every-trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor Is Incompatible with Culture

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian, with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellowmen pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds cannot make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality" Means Pleasure to Eye, Ear, Heart.

The Woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Here Comes a Squealer

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

I SAW a group of Senators, of grave and reverend mien,
Their brows were high, their speech was low, their hands and collars clean.
I thought, "How statesmenlike they look! How noble is their pose!
Who'd dare to probe the probity of Senators like those?"
But like a fleet of frightened fawns they swiftly vanished when
I walked into their midst and cried; "The squealer's loose again!"

For Senators have dignity, and Senators have pomp;
They spurn the brutal boss and crafty heeler,
But their faces will turn ashen in a most surprising fashion
When they hear the horrid words:
HERE COMES A SQUEALER!

Some legislators I beheld, alert, industrious gents,
Who talked about the way they served their fond constituents.
I heard them view the public press with manifest alarm.
I heard them swear no expose could do them any harm.
And then I saw them scattering like chickens to a meal
Because I simply said to them: "Get ready for a squeal!"

"All criticism I defy!" the Legislator cries
In accents like a Coney Island spieler,
But he quickly ducks for cover like a flock of fleeing plover
When he hears the hideous words:
HERE COMES A SQUEALER!

I saw a bunch of judges from assorted upper courts,
The pillars of the sovereign State, the Commonwealth's supports;
Their gowns were long, their legs were short, their heads devoid of hair,
And they had brains beneath the bone that bulged and billowed there.
But as from coil to spark-plug flie n the vitalizing "juice,"
They vanished when I merely said: "Look out! The squealer's loose!"

For Justices are reverend, and Justices are grave;
They have no traffic with a do ubic dealer,
But they shucked their silken habits and dugout like startled rabbits
At the most unlegal phrase:
HERE COMES A SQUEALER!
